'Sand Boils' Menace Cairo As Ohio Crest Batters Levee

Geysers Blast Crevasses Within Walled City; House Topples.

15 Are Drowned Near New Madrid

Flood Developments.

Major tragedy of the inundation was at New Madrid, Mo., where it was revealed that 14 were dead and 14 missing after a Government barge collapsed there Saturday.

At Memphis, 120,000 workers strove to strengthen levees against the mounting crest of the Mississippi. Officials were optimistic as the river remained stationary.

In Arkansas, sub-freezing temperatures added to the distress of refugees and workers along the river. The Mississippi and Arkansas rivers both continued to rise.

Cairo's embattled populace was harassed by more than 60 geysers of water which exploded in the town. The Ohio began to rise again.

At New Orleans officials expressed confidence that levees along the valley would hold when the inundation reached them.

'Sand Boils.'

By the United Press.

Cairo, Ill., Feb. 2.—Thousands of gallons of water gushed out of the earth in the north end tonight and houses collapsed as big "sand boils" added to the peril and terror in this walled city—already sorely beset by two flooded rivers.

With the near crest of the Ohio hammering against her 63-foot wall and surrounded by water, Cairo battled an enemy within the gates in an attempt to keep itself intact in the Mississippi's worst flood.

All day sand boils—springs of ground water which force their way to the surface when floods cut off their ordinary outlets—appeared in the streets.

Two of them were 6 feet wide, and men rushed up with sandbags to build a protecting wall around them to imprison the water that came out in geysers.

House Collapses.

Then, near dusk, a big "boil" developed in the northern end of the town.

There was a roar and a gush of thousands of gallons of water, springing free from the imprisoning earth. A gas main broke and heavy, sickening fumes spread. The sidewalk sank 3 feet.

A large pond developed where the earth had humped itself upward and then collapsed.

The northern section, around Thirty-first and Poplar streets, had been evacuated several days ago when Mayor August Bode ordered women and children out of the city. Surging up fractions of inches, the Ohio sent its crest down against the V-shaped wall—63 feet high in places—that guards the town where 14,000 persons once lived.

Valley Watches Cairo.

Half a million persons along the lower Mississippi Valley turned their eyes northward to watch Cairo's fight.

Cairo was stripped for battle. Military orders were shouted through the streets. Workmen patrolled every foot of the icy wall. No one can enter Cario unless on urgent business. Able-bodied men have been asked to remain in the town to go to work on the levee if necessary.

Army engineers, crafty river fighters who have met the flood challenge for years, watched their gauge as it went up and up.

Ahead of the crest, down through Hickman, Ky.; New Madrid, Mo.; Tiptonville, Tenn., and even as far south as Helena and Mellwood, Ark., there was fear and uncertainty. Behind it, in Louisville and Paducah, there was death and disease.

Sub-freezing temperatures added to the distress of refugees in Louisville, where there still were no adequate heating facilities. Paducah was almost deserted by its 34,000 inhabitants, and water washed against houses.

Fear of an epidemic caused a quarantine to be declared through 12 miles of Louisville.

"Staff" Nearing Cairo.

By tomorrow Maj. Gen. Edward Markham, chief of Arm/ Engineers, will be in personal command of the battle here. With him are WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, Surgeon General Thomas Parran and James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the Red Cross.

Earthquakes Reported At Points in Virginia

Richmond, Va., Feb. 2 (AP).—Residents of a wide area in central Virginia reported what they believed to be a slight earthquake tonight.

Russell Moon, newspaper correspondent at Warminister, in Buckingham County, said houses shook and windows rattled in that area at 8:25 p. m.

Year's Coldest Day Sends Groundhog Back to His Den

Twenty-six degrees above zero, the year's lowest temperature here, saluted the groundhog yesterday, sending him back into his cozy grotto before he had a chance to look for his shadow. A minimum of 18 degrees before sunrise today was the weatherman's prediction.

It was the coldest day since December 1, a 20-mile penetrating northwest wind producing more of a wintry effect than borne out by the themometer.

According to the Weather Bureau, the day's lowest temperature was 26 degrees at 8 a. m., and the highest was 31 degrees at 4 p. m.

Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Health Department's bureau of preventable diseases, declined to venture an opinion as to whether the cold, dry spell would affect, favorably or otherwise, the Capital's influenza and pneumonia situation.

"Although there is no real epidemic," he said, "the number of cases is above normal. Whether the change from rainy, moderately warm weather will arrest the outbreak is something no one can tell."

Private Utility GetsUltimatum On TVA Power

Contract Extension Seen Only if Exclusive Rights Resigned.

By Russell Smith.

The Tennessee Valley Authority last night threw down the gage to the private utility industry when it announced it will extend its contract with the Commonwealth & Southern companies, which expires today, only if the company gives up exclusive rights to the use of TVA power in its territory.

Culmination of weeks of indecision as to future Federal power policy, the announcement indicated the Administration will adhere closely to the policies of Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, in emphasis of a purely Federal power development.

Regardless of Commonwealth & Southern's acceptance of the offer, it indicated clearly that the Government intends to force adoption of a Federal "yardstick," whereby power rates throughout the country can be measured, public versus private.

The announcement also was regarded as sounding the knell for pooling of private and public power after its generation, a point upon which Norris has insisted even against the proposals of Chairman Harcourt Morgan, of TVA, who has attempted to initiate a program of Government-business co-operation in an effort to avoid "class warfare."

Commonwealth & Southern was offered a 30-day option on renewal of the contract, officials said last night. They added that the offer was made to Wendell Willkie, president of the power company, at Knoxville.

To Arrive Here Today.

United Press dispatches from Knoxville quoted Willkie as saying, after a four-hour conference with TVA officials there, that he was leaving for Washington and would reach here at 11:45 a. m. today.

When read the TVA exposition of what was said to be his position, Willkie said last night at Knoxville, "I will state tomorrow the Commonwealth & Southern position on what, incidentally, is not the Commonwealth & Southern position."

In their announcement, TVA officials here said the authority is willing to sell and interchange power with the private firm and that "every reasonable accommodation" will be given the company in use of TVA land and facilities at Muscle Shoals and elsewhere.

States C. & S. Position.

But Commonwealth & Southern they added, is willing to agree to an extension of the contract only if TVA will pledge not to sell power in Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi and Georgia. The announcement continued:

"As a condition of the purchase of power, the Commonwealth & Southern position is that the TVA must give it a monopoly over TVA power, which would prevent the Tennessee Valley Authority from selling power to municipalities, rural co-operatives or industries in any part of the four States in which the Commonwealth & Southern operates.

"The authority is not empowered and should not be empowered to confer such a monopoly upon the private utilities of the Southeast. The Tennessee Valley Authority statute, the constitutional and statutory rights of municipalities and other public agencies, as well as public policy, seem clearly to forbid such monopoly over public property."

12-Year-Old Girl Married to Youth Of 19 in New York

Watertown, N. Y., Feb. 2 (AP).—The marriage of a 12-year-old girl and a 19-year-old Watertown youth who had been "keeping company" for a year, was revealed today.

"I wouldn't want to be separated from Stanley for anything," the girl, Leona E. Roshie, said as she told of her marriage to Stanley S. Backus at Carthage on January 15.

Her mother, Mrs. Joseph J. Roshie, of Watertown, who herself married at 16, sanctions the wedding.

As for the Sneedville, Tenn., child bride, the girl said: "I thought that Stanley and I were bad enough, but that is worse yet." Nine-year-old Eunice Winstead Johns was married to a 22-year-old Tennessee mountaineer, Charles Johns, two weeks ago in Sneedville.

Madrid Hero Resigns Post And Vanishes

Mysterious Gen. Kleber Quits as Assaults on Capital Continue.

By the United Press.

Madrid, Feb. 2.—Gen. Emilio Kleber, hulking "mystery man" of the Spanish civil war and erstwhile American doughboy, has given up command of the loyalists' famous International Brigade, it was revealed tonight.

Kleber, who fights like a Tartar but talks with the polish of a drawing room diplomat, was said to have disappeared from Madrid.

The loyalist defense junta, which named him to the supreme command of the northern Madrid front November 27, refused to discuss his desertion of 3,000 foreign soldiers of fortune—"the greatest strategists in the government's armies."

Madrid Communists, who regarded Kleber as their hero and the savior of Madrid, adopted a resolution imploring him to return.

Loss Is Disastrous Blow.

The loss of Gen. Kleber was seen as a disastrous blow at the heroic defenders of the once beautiful Spanish capital, now a shambles.

Disorganization had struck the bombed city of domes and towers when the rebel airmen began their bombing. The fighting at the outskirts was being carried by Gen. Franco's Moors and Fascists.

Then came the International Brigade, more than 3,000 strong, with Kleber in command. The tide of battle turned. The guns ground and rumbled, now nearer, now farther from Madrid, re-echoing across the Castillian plans, but Franco had been thwarted for the time being, at least.

The title of mystery man fits Kleber like a glove. Little is known of him, save that he is a swashbuckling soldier of fortune, a German who claims to have become a naturalized Canadian citizen.

Aided Soviet From Start.

Stationed on the Eastern Front with the Germans in the World War, he is said to have aided the Soviet from the outset in Russia. He campaigned through the Asiatic steppes in the bitter years of 1918 and 1919, according to reports.

Others say Kleber was in one of the allied armies, but the facts are unsubstantiated, as much else about the life of this soldier.

During the Bolivian-Paraguayan war in the Gran Chaco he is said to have played an important part as a commander of Bolivian troops.

Thence he drifted across the world's clouded scene to the great Spanish civil war, to become, to Red Spain, a Messiah, and to his troops, a god.

Fighting Renewed.

Madrid, Feb. 2 (AP).—Fighting was renewed on all Madrid fronts today, with both government and insurgent troops attempting to press an offensive.

The Fascists shelled Vallecas, on the southwest, but Madrid defense officials said the rebels were unable to advance there in an apparent effort to cut the Madrid-Valencia highway.

There was an insurgent attack at El Plantio also, but the government announced its own troops were victorious.

Farther south, in the Aranjuez sector, the government attacked and there was intermittent gunfire in the University City area.

On none of the fronts, however, was there an important change in either Fascist or Socialist positions.

Alabama Repeals 'Aged' Prohibition

Montgomery, Ala., Feb. 2 (AP).—The Alabama Legislature overrode a gubernatorial veto today and enacted a prohibition repealer which ended the State's 22 years of "bone dry" prohibition.

The county option State store control bill will bring legal whisky into Alabama around April 1 in counties voting for repeal in a special election March 10.

This action leaves Kansas the only "bone dry" State in the Nation. Tennessee, Mississippi, Georgia and Oklahoma ban hard liquor, but permit beer.

Senator Urges Inquiry in Financial Structure and Control.

'Parley Indicated,' Says John L. Lewis

By William V. Nessly.

A complete investigation of the huge General Motors Corporation, its financial structure, control and operation, is called for in a resolution introduced in the Senate late yesterday by Senator M. M. Neely, of West Virginia.

The resolution was taken as an answer by John L. Lewis, strike chieftain, to the action of General Motors in obtaining from a Michigan circuit court yesterday the order for evacuation of General Motors plants at Flint by Lewis' "sit-down" strikers.

Thus, in the course of the day Lewis lost one important weapon in his gigantic and tenacious struggle with the powerful motors concern, and promptly grasped another. And last night Lewis himself was speeding to Detroit to survey the strike situation at first hand, 'confer with my own people there" and map the future conduct of the momentous industrial dispute.

New Hope Is Seen.

In the Capital, however, despite threats of further strike violence and reported heated feeling over the court procedure, there was a feeling among some that peace negotiations were actually brought closer by yesterday's developments. If the court order is carried out today and the strikers leave the plants, the only obstacle that has stood in the way up to this time of direct peace talks between the owners and the strikers will have been removed. General Motors officials have said they would negotiate when the strikers are off of the company's property, and Lewis last night declared that "a conference is indicated."

The Neely resolution provides for a thorough investigation by the Senate Lobby Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Hugo L. Black (Democrat), of Alabama. It was referred to the Education and Labor Committee, also headed by Black. Among stated objectives of the inquiry would be determination whether it would be "practicable for General Motors and its related companies" to establish a 30-hour week and "minimum living wage standards. Black is also author of a 30-hour work week bill pending in the Senate.

On his train en route to Detroit Lewis last night dictated to reporters a statement in which he said:

"Our attitude is as it has been—that a controversy exists and that a conference is indicated.

"Every moral and logical consideration indicates a conference between the contesting parties. After

Pope Schedules Active Program 5 Months Ahead

Vatican City, Feb. 2 (AP).—Pope Pius XI made out a long-term program for himself today, indicating he was convinced that he could continue the duties of his church for some time despite his serious illness.

He tentatively set dates as far ahead as May and intimated he wanted to go to his summer residence at Castel Grandolfo at the end of that month. Last year he took his vacation there at the end of June.

The Pontiff was reported to be in fairly good condition today although he did not rest well last night. He lacked sufficient strength to receive candles which customarily are given him on Candlemas Day.

Text of Michigan Court Injunction Ordering Sit-Down Strikers Out of Auto Body Plants

Auto Firm Restriction Rejected by Lawyers for Enjoined Men.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 2 (AP).—Following is the text of injunction granted today by Circuit Judge Paul V. Gadola ordering evacuation of 'sit-down' strikers from Fisher Body plants Nos. 1 and 2:

This cause came to be heard upon the motion of application of the plaintiff for a temporary mandatory injunction, based upon the allegations of the plaintiff's amended bill of complaint on file herein. to the application, and this court being advised in the premises, and it satisfactorily appearing to this court that the plaintiff is entitled to the order of this court authorizing the issuance of a preliminary mandatory injunction in accordance with the prayer of said amended bill of compliant.

Therefore, on motion of Brownell and Gault, attorneys for the plaintiff, it is ordered, adjudged and decreed, for this court, by virtue of the authority vested, and in pursuance of the statutes in such case made and provided, doth hereby order, adjudge and decree that the clerk of this court issue forthwith a preliminary mandatory injunction in favor of the plaintiff and against the above-named defendants, and to all other persons to whom knowledge of said injunctions shall come, and to their counselors, attorneys and agents, and each and every one of them; commanding them and all such persons under the penalty of $15,000,000 to be levied upon their lands, goods and chattels, that they and each and every one of them do:

National Guards Clash With Pickets Near Chevrolet Works.

By the United Press.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 2.—One thousand sit-down strikers told Gov. Frank Murphy in telegrams tonight that they would defy a court injunction ordering them out of Fisher Body plants No. 1 and 3.

Circuit Judge Paul V. Gadola, who issued the injunction, set 3 p. m. today as the deadline for evacuation of Fisher plants 1 and 2. After that time, he said, strikers will be subject to citation for contempt of court.

The telegrams were addressed to Gov. Murphy at his headquarters in a Detroit hotel.

"We have decided," they said, "to stay in the plant. We have no delusions about the sacrifices this decision will entail. We know that if a violent effort is made to oust us many of us will be killed."

Later, in Detroit, high union officials said the telegrams were official and that their dispatch to Gov. Murphy were planned as part of strike strategy. They said they were certain that the Governor would not use State troops to enforce the strikers' ejection.

By the Associated Press.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 2.—Hundreds of striking automobile workers in possession of two Fisher Body Co. plants here since December 30 heard tonight the order of a circuit court judge that they evacuate by 3 p. m. (Eastern Standard time) tomorrow.

Sheriff Thomas Wolcott, carrying a copy of the injunction issued on petition of General Motors Corporation by Judge Paul V. Gadola, went first to plant No. 2 and then to plant No. 1, reading its terms to the sit-down strikers who listened in orderly silence.

Good-natured booing accompanied the sheriff's departure from the No. 1 plant, where he had been shouted down January 2 when he tried to read a previous injunction.

Negotiations Foreseen.

Statements looking toward negotiations to settle the Nation-wide strikes that have slashed deeply into General Motors production came from both sides tonight.

William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of the corporation, said that as soon as the plants have been "restored to our possession" General Motors will negotiate with the United Automobile Workers of America on the eight union demands made January 4, and added:

"We will do all that lies in our power to make a prompt and honorable settlement."

At Baltimore, en route to Detroit to assume personal command of the strikes which his Committee for Industrial Organization has supported, John L. Lewis said "every moral and logical consideration indicates a conference between the contesting parties."

Lewis declined comment on the injunction ordering evacuation of the plants. Homer Martin, U. A. W. A. president at Detroit, said that "we will not fight the Government."

Lewis Is Silent.

James F. Dewey, Federal Labor Department conciliator en route to Flint, arrived in Detroit and conferred at dinner tonight with Gov. Frank Murphy. Before Lewis left Washington, Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor, advised him to see Murphy on his arrival tomorrow.

The injunction issued by Judge Gadola directed the strikers, whose occupancy of the Fisher plants has blocked every effort of conciliators so far, to cease occupying the factories, to vacate the premises by 3 p. m., February 3, and to refrain from picketing at the plant or loitering at any places where nonstriking employes "enter or alight from conveyances en route from or to said plants."

The corporation in its petition had stated the strikers were no longer in the company's employ. Today's injunction ordered them to:

"Absolutely desist and refrain from continuing on or being in, on,

Joshua Evans, Banker's Son, Dies in South

District Student Injured in Auto Crash, Is Victim of Pneumonia.

His condition weakened by a long—and apparently successful—fight against infantile paralysis, Joshua Evans 3d, son of a Washington banker and a student at George Washington University, died yesterday of pneumonia, following injuries suffered Saturday in an automobile accident near Hamlet, N. C.

Death came in a hospital at Hamlet with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., at the bedside. The elder Evans is a vice president of the Hamilton National Bank. Mr. Evans phoned news of his son's death at 2:34 in the afternoon to officials at the bank here.

Was to Be Leiter Guest.

Meanwhile, it was understood, young Evans' companions on the fatal auto ride, Angelica Lloyd, 19-year-old Washington debutante, and Randall Hagner, jr., 21-year-old son of a well known Washington real estate operator, had recovered from their injuries and continued on to Aiken, S. C., to the house party Evans was to have attended with them.

Hostess at the house party was Miss Nancy Leiter, a Washington debutante of last year, daughter of the late Joseph Leiter, Chicago grain king.

The accident occurred last Saturday. Evans was the most seriously injured. In his message to friends here yesterday, however, the youth's father said pneumonia which developed Sunday, was believed to have been the direct cause of death.

Recovered From Paralysis.

To all outward appearances, at least, young Evans had achieved complete recovery from infantile paralysis. He was first ill in the summer of 1931 and was, for a time, partly crippled.

He was sent to the Warm Springs Foundation at Warm Springs, Ga., made famous by President Roosevelt, and with the aid of specialists there and the institution's therapeutic baths, staged a remarkable

Mary Miles Minter Demands Showdown in Screen Slaying

Former Hollywood Star Asks to Be Tried or Cleared in Murder of Desmond Taylor, Director, 15 Years Ago.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 2.—Blonde Mary Miles Minter, one-time silent film queen whose name was linked 15 years ago with the William Desmond Taylor murder case, strangest of picture colony death mysteries, tonight marched into the district attorney's office and demanded "a showdown in the Taylor case to clear my name and his."

Her blue eyes glinting with anger, Miss Minter said she was prepared through attorneys to demand that she "either be tried for the murder of William Desmond Taylor, or the district attorney's office issue a statement saying they had no evidence against her."

Her sudden appearance, on the fifteenth anniversary of the day the director was found shot in his apartment, came less than an hour after another woman had entered the case, and blasted the police theory that Taylor had been shot by his brother.

The woman said she was Taylor's sister-in-law, and produced a bundle of papers and a photograph which Capt. Jess Wynn of the district attorney's investigating staff said cleared Taylor's brother, Dennis Gage Deane-Tanner, of suspicion in the case.

Shortly afterwards Miss Minter, informed of the new development in the bizarre mystery that has harried her for 15 years and is credited with wrecking her film career, stalked into the office of District Attorney Buron Fitts. With her was her lawyer, Eugene H. Marcus.

Marcus demanded the district attorney produce a pink nightgown, with the initials "M. M. M.," supposedly found in Taylor's apartment after he was killed.

Investigators admitted they did not have possession of the garment.

Body Found in Apartment.

The body of William Desmond Taylor, one of the leading directors of his day, was found sprawled on the floor of his apartment in the movie capital, February 2, 1922. He had been shot to death.

Rumors current with the resultant investigation brought into the limelight the names of Mary Miles Minter, Mabel Normand and others who were prominent on the screen in that day.

Collins Plans Chain Bridge One-Way Toll

By James D. Secrest.

A proposal that a one-way toll system be installed on the new Chain Bridge to force Virginians to pay a share of the cost was made yesterday by Chairman Collins of the House sub-committee on District appropriations.

He said the matter will be considered by his sub-committee when it begins executive hearings on the 1938 District supply bill next week.

The plan Collins has in mind would force Virginians and others entering the District via tthe Chain Bridge to pay the toll, but would exempt persons leaving the District for Virginia over the same route.

Future Action Hinted.

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, who was one of the sponsors of the new Chain Brdige, declined to comment on Collins' suggestion beyond saying:

"I don't care to enter into a controversy with Mr. Collins in the newspapers. I'll take care of that matter when it comes before us in committee."

Collins made the proposal upon the return of the District sub-committee from an inspection tour of streets and bridges for which improvements have been asked in the 1938 budget. He said he saw no reason why Virginia shouldn't share in the cost of the new span, for which an initial appropriation of $200,000 was carried in the 1937 appropriations act.

The new District sub-committee chairman disclosed his opposition to suggestions by the District Commissioners that part of the gasoline tax fund might be diverted for municipal expenses other than streets and bridges.

Budget Seen Inadequate.

Even though the gasoline tax should be raised, he said, all of the money would be needed for street extensions, repaving and repairs.

"The street improvement projects in the 1938 budget aren't nearly enough," he said, "although they would absorb all the money available out of the gasoline tax fund.

"The new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge for instance will, and should, cost more than the $1,500,000 estimated by the Commissioners. Lots of streets, like Tenth street, need widening.

"This city has grown so rapidly within the last few years that there are sections of the city which are badly in need of new streets."

Today the District sub-committee

'Rags' Warring and Four of Gang Sentenced, Sixth Gets Longer Term in Hijack-Shooting

Charles R. (Rags) Warring and four of his gangland henchmen were sentenced to serve 18 months to 2 years in prison yesterday by Justice Peyton Gordon in the shooting of Joseph E. O'Brien last July in what police described as a hijacking war.

A fifth member of the group the prosecution contended participated in the wounding of O'Brien—George F. Tear, brother of Richard Tear, fiance of the slain Corinna Lorring—who already is serving from 18 months to two years for laying down a smoke screen, was given an additional two to three years by the justice.

When the prisoners were brought into the courtroom, packed with their relatives, Justice Gordon scanned his records.

"If I could find out who shot this man," he said, "I might not be so ready to impose heavy sentence."

"Your honor, I did the shooting," asserted Joseph S. Bond, one of the men waiting to hear what punishment the law would mete out.

"Bond—Joseph Bond," said the prisoner.

Those sentenced with Warring were Bond, Sam S. Montgomery, Clarence Ware, John Sweeney and Tear.

The prisoners were sentenced after a lengthy trial before Justice Gordon last month. All had pleaded not guilty. Prosecuting them was Assistant United States Attorney Irving Goldstein, while Warring and his friends had as their defense attorneys Harry T. Whelan, Charles E. Ford and W. Bissell Thomas.

At this time O'Brien, a cripple for life with his knees rendered helpless by bullets, was lifted to the stand.

But he gave little evidence because, police said, he was afraid gangland's vengeance might strike again and seal his lips forever.

According to testimony, two automobibles, bearing mobsters, drew past O'Brien as he stood conversing with two cronies. Guns in the car barked, and he fell wounded.

The argument which led to the crime, as police reconstructed it, was the hijacking of an automobile of liquor consigned, they said, to Warring and his codefendants.

O'Brien, it was alleged, hijacked the liquor, then demanded $100 from the prisoners for the return of their automobile. For some time O'Brien hovered between life and death after he was hurt.

Two men, supposed to have been standing with O'Brien at the time, refused to testify at the inquiry into the crime, and have been indicted by the grand jury for perjury.

They are William R. (Courtney) Carpenter and Harry (Spike) Behrle.

Lindberghs Break Air Trip at Rome After Stop at Pisa

Rome, Feb. 2 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh landed at Littorio airport today on the second lap of a flight from England presumably en route to Egypt, and drove into Rome by automobile after avoiding a welcoming crowd of 200 persons.

The Lindberghs landed at 4:58 p. m., a little less than two hours after they left Pisa, where they stopped last night after an unannounced take-off from Lympne, England.

The tall American and his small wife, the former Anne Morrow, dashed through a hangar and skirted a dozen airplanes to avoid the pursuing crowd, which extended the Fascist salute. There were a few cheers.

For a time last night, before it became known they had landed at Pisa, authorities in many countries were on watch, fearing an accident.

Connery Joins U. S. Employes Overtime Fight

Amendment to Demand Pay or Days Off to Balance Extra Work.

The first move to put an end to overtime work by Government employes will be made in the House today when Representative Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, will offer an amendment to the independent offices appropriations bill now under consideration.

Connery said his amendment will stipulate that the salaries of department heads will be withheld if they permit employes under their supervision to work overtime without giving them equal time off or pay at the rate of time and a half.

Because the amendment would be restrictive in character, Connery believes that it will not be subject to a point of order as a legislative rider on an appropriations bill.

Wants Extra Pay.

Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, meanwhile reiterated his recommendation for legislation to insure Government employes either time off or extra pay for overtime work.

Commenting on the Civil Service Commission report that Federal and District employes worked nearly 14,000,000 hours overtime from July 1 to December 31, Ramspeck said:

"This report justifies the provision which the House wrote into the leave bills last year but which the Senate struck out. It is apparent now that the House was right, and I believe there will be legislation offered at this session to remedy this situation."

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, announced that his organization will seek immediate legislative action to put a stop to the "outrageous and indefensible conditions of overtime employment in the Federal services."

Calls Overtime Usual.

"These reports show, as advices in the hands of the National Federation of Federal Employes for years have indicated, that in numerous Federal agencies overtime is not an emergency matter but one of routine and custom," Steward said. "That is very plainly revealed in the statistical evidence submitted to Congress.

"It is clear that the imposition of overtime hours has become virtually standard practice in numerous branches of the Federal Government. Overtime does not occur just during one month or at one particular time, but it is spread out very evenly, showing plainly that much overtime is being imposed not because of emergency conditions, but rather as an ordinary administrative practice."

Col. Charles I. Stengle, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, said:

"The report of the Committee on Hours of Duty and Overtime has thrown much light on two points which have heretofore been the subject of much misapprehension."

"Conscientious Workers."

"In the first place," he continued, "the report shows that Government employes are unquestionably hard working and conscientious. That is a thesis we have publicly urged on many occasions heretofore, and now an official body gives our affirmation official confirmation. When the average employe works 25 hours overtime, on the average, each month, that employe is earning his or her pay, and is sincerely interested in his or her work.

"Second, the report demonstrates clearly that Government reorganization cannot be expected to mean much reduction of force if the present governmental functions are to be retained, because obviously the force is inadequate at the present time."

Constitutional Action On Child Labor Assailed

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 2 (AP).—Gov. Wilbur L. Cross in a letter to President Roosevelt made public today asserted he favored abolition of child labor, but said that an amendment to the Federal Constitution seeking that end "should be an act of last resort."

A resolution proposing ratification of the amendment, defeated twice in previous legislative sessions, was introduced today in both Houses of the General Assembly.

New Faces in Congress

New York's George B. Kelly Knows Problems of Workers

GEORGE B. KELLY.

Early Experience as a Sweat-Shop Employe Gives Him Intimate Slant on Conditions; Owes His Election to Labor Vote.

By Liam Lenihan.

Maybe it was the gift of blarney—heritage from the "Ould Sod." Or maybe it was his active interest in the wants of the underprivileged. Yet whatever it was, when the election judges of the Italian-dominated Thirty-eighth District of New York State counted the votes last November they proclaimed George B. Kelly victor and a Congressman-elect.

Poised and quiet-spoken, the good-looking, brown-eyed freshman on Capitol Hill bears a strong resemblance to the G. O. P.'s high-pressure salesman, John D. M. Hamilton.

Born in Waterloo, N. Y., December 12, 1900, Kelly graduated from parochial school at Rochester and at the age of 14 was punching a time clock in a clothing factory.

Long hours and sweat-shop pay are conducive to social thinking and soon the child-worker became interested in labor problems.

He still retains that interest. He still believes this country of ours with its wealth, its far-flung boundaries, its vast resources, could and should correct the abuses of our system.

He believes in democracy but he is not a doctrinaire. We should find the best features in all systems, he holds, and weld them to our purpose.

Representative Kelly found politics thrust upon him. As labor relations counsellor for a clothing concern he dealt for many years with the powerful Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union.

To that job Kelly brought tact and an understanding born of his background among the workers. This, with his knowledge of Italian, seized upon by the local Democratic big-wigs as qualifications that would be the open sesame to a political career.

In 1932 he ran for the Assembly—in a district that had returned Republican five and twenty years. And when they counted the votes he was in by a narrow margin. The following year he was re-elected for a one-year term, and in 1934 he "crashed" the State Senate.

Kelly opposed Democrat-incumbant James Duffy in the Congressional primaries last year. He was supported by Labor and elected. In the November election he galloped home lengths ahead of four opponents of all hues.

The 36-year-old Congressman is still "feeling his way" but his vote will always be cast in the interests of the workingman. He believes in collective bargaining and the Wagner Labor Relations act. "If it is vetoed as unconstitutional we should legislate an amendment," he said. And of those who oppose forward-looking legislation he had this much to say: "Their very opposition drives hundreds into the radical camp."

Hobbies? Handball and tennis and duck shooting in Canadian marshes. Intellectual interests? Poetry and the history of English literature.

Mayor of Louisville Urges Flood Patience

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 2 (AP).—With the flood waters of the Ohio River receding slowly, Mayor Neville Miller urged the people of Louisville "to have patience" and not all try to return to their homes immediately.

Mayor Miller required that the word "quarantine" not be used, pointing out there was no epidemic there but that the guard had been placed merely to prevent an epidemic starting.

The mayor said he did not know what the death total amounted to or whether a large number of persons was sick. The latest death list announced yesterday was 221.

Rawlins Park Will Be Paved, Relandscaped

Plot Separating Old and New Interior Buildings to Be Improved.

Rawlins Park, recently condensed to permit widening of its four boundary streets, is to be completely relandscaped, the Interior Department announced yesterday.

Separating the old and new Interior buildings, the square is bounded by Eighteenth, Nineteenth and North and South E streets. It is named for Gen. John A. Rawlins, whose statue stands in the park.

Overhauling of the square will be done in conjunction with landscaping of the grounds surrounding the new Interior Building. Preliminary plans were drawn up by the National Park Service.

Oriental plane trees, Japanese yew and evergreen ground cover will be used for decoration of the building.

Four bands of trees will be planted in the park. There will be two broad walks separated by long, narrow reflecting pools. Flowering magnolia trees will border the pools. The two outer bands probably will be of willow oak.

All park paving will be of flagstone. Eventually the park, said the announcement, will form one in a series of open areas complementing adjacent building sites as the main axis of the design becoming the axis of development of the "northwest rectangle," extending five blocks to the west of Rawlins Park.

Sen. King Asks More Powers For D. C. Chiefs

Increased powers and more respect should be tendered the District Commissioners, Senator William King, District committee chairman, told the Northeast Business Mens Association at their annual banquet in the Mayflower Hotel last night.

"Soon," said King, "the District will have a population of 1,000,000 people. With the increase will come traffic, hospital, and penal problems. Despite this the District should have lower taxes and the best school system in the United States."

"The District of Columbia, as long as I can recall to mind, has been free from scandal in its administration," King added. "It is in the best interests of the people to allow the commissioners more power."

Sao Ke Alfred Sze, Ambassador from China, and former Central High School student, in a short talk asked that a heartier accord be expressed between his country and America.

"It is said," Sze explained, "that an amabassador is a man who lies abroad for the good of his country. I hope," he added, "I am not in that classification but rather classed as a ship that lies at anchor, when abroad—— a goodwill representative of my country."

Commissioner Melvin Hazen, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Capt. Richard Mansfield of the Ninth Precinct, were introduced to the gathering of 300 persons.

The banquet, the ninth held by the Northeast Business Mens Association, is the first in which women were allowed.

Barges With Explosives Adrift, Endanger Pier

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Two barges, loaded with explosives, broke loose from a tug in the lower bay today, drifted ashore and kept banging against a private pier at the foot of Twenty-fifth street, Brooklyn, before the tug pulled them back into deep water. There were two men on each of the barges.

Northwest Faces Threat of Floods

By the Associated Press.

Portland, Ore., Feb. 2.—Menaces of flood and disease hung over the snow-whitened Pacific Northwest today as the great blizzard of January 31 began to release its paralyzing grasp.

The death list stood at seven in Oregon and Southern Washington with numerous communities isolated.

Rising temperatures ate rapidly into the mountains of snow and created the possibility of a run-off too great for rivers to handle.

Southwestern Oregon, where flood waters were reported rising, remained isolated because the storm severed all wire communications.

Court Orders Auto Strikers Out of Plants

upon or going upon the premises and plants aforesaid, of plaintiff."

The court commanded that Martin and 29 other defendants, as well as "all other persons to whom knowledge of such injunction shall come," obey its terms "under the penalty of $15,000,000 to be levied upon their lands, goods and chattels."

Granting of the injunction climaxed a 24-hour period which saw disturbances injuring a dozen persons at the Chevrolet Motor Co. plants, and the first movement of National Guardsmen into the actual strike zone. An order appended to the injunction, restraining General Motors from any acts of violence against union members, was eliminated from its final draft at the request of union attorneys who claimed its wording was "objectionable" and that it was "dictated by General Motors."

Guards Set up Guns.

Judge Gadola acted shortly after National Guardsmen, holding a rigid military blockade about the huge Chevrolet Motor Co. plants after a night of disorder, set up eight machine guns trained on the street dividing the Chevrolet factory from the Fisher No. 2 plant.

This street was the scene of a bloody riot January 11 in which 27 persons were wounded. The troops arrived the following day, but made their first move into the strike area last night after a dozen persons were injured in renewal of violence.

This afternoon the guardsmen at bayonet point pushed a small group of pickets away from Chevrolet's Motor Assembly Department Plant 4, scene of a new sit-down strike by several hundred members of the United Automobile Workers of America; seized a union sound truck because its operators were "doing too much talking," demolished a picket shanty and detained six men.

Reads Decision.

Less than two hours later, Judge Gadola read to a crowded courtroom his decision granting the injunction. Declaring the only issue involved was "possession of property,' 'the judge cited legal precedents, including Sunpreme Court rulings upholding Michigan's anti-picketing statute.

Of union contentions that the big corporation, because of alleged failure to abide by Federal labor laws, had not come to court with "clean hands" judge said:

"The falsity of such a position is obvious. The courts are open to the defendants if they feel they have been wronged."

The injunction was issued on General Motors petition naming Martin and 29 other union leaders.

At the outset, Judge Gadola said, "It is deplorable that in this country and with the respect for law and order in our institutions that prevail, that it should become necessary to have conditions exist as they are. Courts cannot set up any processes or tribunals to adjust differences between employer and an employe. That is a matter for the Congress or the various State legislatures."

Cites Previous Case.

Justifying his order, Judge Gadola cited the case of Lane vs. Au Sable Electric Co., which was referred to in court Monday by counsel for General Motors. The case, a Michigan litigation, involved the retention by a striking electrical worker of a house which the company had given him to live in.

A number of Michigan Supreme Court decisions upholding the Michigan law on picketing also were quoted by Judge Gadola. (The Michigan law makes it a misdemeanor to molest or in any way interfere with a workman going to his work.)

The court's ruling was contained in a 5,000-word opinion, most of which cited Michigan law and cases of similar import.

Order Not Necessary.

Commenting on a defense contention that union atttorneys had had insufficient time to prepare their argumens, the judge said, "the order to show cause which was issued in this case was not necessarv and was just a courtesy."

Replying to an argument of Lee Pressman, union counsel, that General Motors attorneys had "quoted a statute of 1898; today we must work under the mandate of 1936," Judge Gadola stated:

"This court cannot take a mandate of 1936, but must follow the decisions of the Supreme Court of Michigan."

The judge concluded his decision as follows:

"The injunction shall be issued out of this court commanding the defendants that have appeared, and all defendants, and all persons operating through, under or by virtue of any contract with these defendants, to evacuate the premises in question, and further that they shall be restrained from picketing the plants of the plaintiff.

"This order further provides that the sheriff of this county shall read the order of this court in the premises described to the parties therein, and that shall be sufficient notice of the order of the court to all parties involved. And further providing that the evacuation shall be done within 24 hours from this time."

Lewis Speeds to Scene.

As the guardsmen's guns were ready to subdue any attempt to violence in tense Flint, John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization directing the widespread automobile strikes which have cut General Motors production almost to the vanishing point, left Washington for Detroit. He was scheduled to address mass meetings in Michigan automotive centers, including Pontiac, Lansing and Flint.

U. A. W. A. headquarters in Detroit said Lewis, whose C. I. O. group is at odds with the American Federation of Labor, was coming to confer on plans to "intensify the strikes."

Production of the automobile industry for the week was estimated at 70,495 units, a decrease of nearly 3,000 from the previous week, by Automotive Daily News, trade publication which said General Motors divisions were "out of the picture as far as passenger car production is concerned."

Lamp Plant Opened.

General Motors today reopened its Guide Lamp division at Anderson, Ind., the first corporation unit where a strike has occurred to resume operations. It was closed by a sit-down strike December 28, and the union men evacuated the building January 16 under terms of Gov. Frank Murphy's "Lansing agreement."

The agreement, designed to open the way to negotiations for a general strike settlement, failed when opposing leaders charged "bad faith," the union refused to evacuate the Fisher plants, and General Motors declined to confer under such conditions.

A 15-day "truce" period set by the agreement expired yesterday. Until today's reopening at Anderson, General Motors had announced it had not recalled any workers in strike-closed plants, although nearly 50,000 employes of units affected by parts shortages were called back to work in Chevrolet and Fisher plants last week.

Discharge Protested.

Richard T. Frankensteen, U. A. W. A. organizer, claimed a walkout of 120 union men protesting discharge of a worker at the Chevrolet Gear & Axle division in Detroit had "crippled" operations there today.

The guardsmen who seized the union sound truck within military lines at the Chevrolet plant in Flint today detained its operators, Merlin Bishop and Paul Garrison, and four other men in the vicinity, Frank Gallagher, James Austin and Arden Price, all of Flint, and Frank Walintowski, 26, of Toledo, Ohio.

The men were taken to jail, where National Guard officers said they turned the men over to "civil authorities."

Bishop had announced that the sit-down strikers in the motor assembly plant were "on a hunger strike" after guardsmen had refused to pass persons carrying food through the military lines.

Late today, however, after a committee of union leaders made an inspection trip through the plant, several men said to be nonemployes of the plant left the premises, and Roy Reuther, union organizer, said, "I think the boys will have food before long."

At Detroit, Gov. Murphy had been represented as willing that food be passed through the military lines if it were determined the "sit-downers" were regular employes of the department when the strike began.

An authoritative source close to Gov. Murphy said the State executive regarded yesterday's disorders within and outside the Chevrolet plants, in which the women's "emergency brigade" of the union participated, as bordering on "organized insurrection."

Coyle, terming union charges of discrimination against its members "wholly without foundation," said that "the affair was maliciously and obviously planned by a minority faction without any consideration for the best interests of the people of Flint."

Martin, saying General Motors workers "have seen thugs and professional strike-breakers imported into their own plants," termed the outbreak "the result of three things —discriminatory discharge of union workers; growing resentment against the corporation * * * the swelling tide of public disapproval at huge profits of the corporation and the large returns to the few individuals who control it."

Wirephoto: Mattson Kidnaper Sketches

Two official drawings of the kidnaper of Charles Mattson, 10, in Tacoma, Wash., were released yesterday by the Bureau of Investigation and were wirephotoed throughout the Nation to aid agents and police in their search.

Mattson Slayer's Portrait, Drawn by F. B. I., Broadcast

An artist's drawing of the bearded cruel-featured man who kidnaped and murdered 10-year-old Charles Mattson, of Tacoma, Wash., in the Christmas period, was released yesterday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice.

The drawing was made from oral descriptions of the kidnaper supplied by children who were in the Mattson home the day little Charles was "snatched."

In broadcasting this drawing, the F. B. I. is following a procedure adopted after the kidnaping and murder of Charles Lindbergh, jr. At that time an artist's drawing of the kidnaper, based on a description furnished by Dr. "Jafsie" Condon, was prepared. When Bruno Richard Hauptmann was captured, it was discovered he bore an astounding resemblance to the artist's conception.

The Mattson kidnaper is described as about 30 years old, 5 feet 7 or 8 inches tall, about 145 to 165 pounds and swarthy of complexion. The children said he was somewhat stooped, had a dimple in his chin, high cheek bones, a broken nose and hairy hands. He spoke broken English and appeared to be of Southern European extraction.

By an act of Congress January 12, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings has offered a reward of $10,000 for information leading to the man's arrest.

Resolution Is Viewed as Lewis' Reply to Order for Evacuation.

all, that is the only way to settle a controversy unless it is desirable to await the exhaustion of one of the contestants or until one adversary beats the other down."

The Neely resolution is sweeping in its provisions. It calls for comprehensive information on General Motors and "all other persons, firms and corporations which control or direct policies or activities of General Motors," or vice versa, to find out "whether the corporate structure is such that it enables the corporation to evade State or Federal regulations or to conceal, pyramid or absorb profits contrary to the public interest."

It calls for investigation of capitalization and assets and production costs, profits tand rates paid of return, and investigation of salaries, bonuses and other compensation paid to officers, directors and employes. It directs also study of the extent "to which financial gain due to mechanization and technological improvements, gains which should have been made available in the form of lower prices and increased wages, have been capitalized through stock dividends and other devices and improperly directed to those in control."

In addition, it would determine "the effect of consolidations and see if there have been any write-ups in the purchase price of properties, and whether by propaganda or publicity "or expenditure of money the corporation has sought to influence or control public opinion, legislation or administration or elections."

Meanwhile, both President Roosevelt and Secretary of Labor Perkins maintained silence on the automobile strike. Secretary Perkins communicated with the President by telephone, keeping him in touch with developments. Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary and chief conciliator of the department, remained here for the time being, while James F. Dewey, conciliator, was at the strike scene in Detroit.

Lewis' decision to go to Detroit followed a telephone report given him by Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers from Detroit. Lewis declined to comment publicly on any of the day's developments, and only remarked, quoting Tennyson, as he left his office for the train:

"Let there be no moaning of the bar, when I put out to sea."

"Obviously the controversy has devastating consequences on the business, social and industrial life of America.

"Common sense would indicate that the sane course to pursue would be for both parties to confer without conditions or stipulations.

"We have repeatedly indicated our willingness so to confer.

"Failing to secure such a conference through the attitude of General Motors we have no alternative than to carry on until a peace can be negotiated."

The said sheriff is hereby ordered to cause said plants numbered one and two of Fisher Body Division of General Motors Corporation to be evacuated within 24 hours from the date hereof.

New Injunction Orders Action

Flint,, Mich., Feb. 2 (AP).—An injunction issued today by Circuit Judge Paul V. Gadola differed in several respects from a restraining order issued by Circuit Judge Edward D. Black, although both were designed primarily to cause removal of strikers from two Fisher Body plants here.

Judge Black's injunction, issued three days after union employes began their "stay-in" strikes, was disregarded by the strikers. Although Sheriff Thomas W. Wolcott mobilized 150 or more special deputies with the avowed purpose of ejecting the men from the plants, that attempt never was made.

Last week the sheriff said the reason was that no formal court order requiring him to eject the strikers was issued.

Today's injunction says in conclusion: "The said sheriff is hereby ordered to cause said plants * * * to be evacuated within 24 hours from the date thereof."

Judge Gadola's injunction also refers specifically to the Fisher Plants Nos. 1 and 2. Judge Black's order referred to all plants of General Motors in Flint, although only the two then were occupied.

Flood Relief Donations Soar To $11,453,725

Many Large Contributions Reported; Foreign Gifts Are Received.

The Nation spurted ahead yesterday in its contributions to the National Red Cross Fund for Flood Relief, and a total of $11,453,725 had been collected at the last audit.

Large contributions in various parts of the country yesterday included gifts of $25,000 by the Kellogg Co., of Battle Creek, Mich.; $25,000 by the Davison Fund; $10,000 by J. P. Morgan, a personal contribution in addition to the $25,000 subscribed last week by his firm; $1,500 each by the Anglo-California Bank and the American Trust Co., of San Francisco, and $5,000 from the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., of Winston-Salem, N. C.

Cities Have Big Totals.

Cities yesterday reported large totals. Chicago, $713,000; Detroit, $345,000, and St. Louis, $212,000.

Gifts came from foreign shores also. The Red Cross Chapter at Guam sent $500. From Andres Pastoriza, Dominican Minister to Washington, came a check for $20,000 to President Roosevelt. The money was contributed by President Trujillo.

Of the 3,700 Red Cross chapters in the Nation, 1,185 had exceeded the goals set for them last night.

Far beyond its original mark, and still mounting, was the District total. The mark of $200,000 will be exceeded, officials felt, before the end of the week.

Grayson Sends Wire.

"Admiral Grayson congratulates the District Chapter on its splendid achievement in behalf of Red Cross flood relief. Needs continue to grow. Red Cross now caring for nearly 1,000,000 flood refugees in Ohio and Mississippi valleys. Operating 113 field hospitals and 317 concentration camps. Red Cross furnishing immediate emergency relief for refugees. This must continue for many weeks until water has receded. Possibility additional towns must be evacuated and numbers of refugees will grow. National chairman hopes citizens of your chapter will continue to respond to the fullest extent of their generosity."

Total of the contributions received by The Washington Post yesterday reached $8,148.40

Throughout the city there came word of new donations. The Little Congress, composed of secretaries of the men who make the Nation's laws on Capitol Hill, announced $151.71 had been raised. On February 11 Tallulah Bankhead will give a benefit performance of "Reflected Glory" at the National Theater for flood relief.

Dance Announced.

Vice Commander Ray McCurry, chairman of the entertainment committee of Department of Agriculture Post No. 38, American Legion, yesterday announced a dance February 13 at the Gingham Club for the benefit of the flood sufferers.

The Edward F. Gruver Co. and the Handicraft Leather Co., yesterday sent 15,000 pairs of Army gloves to the Red Cross for the flood area.

Arkansas Refugees Beset by Cold

Throughout the area, mercury readings dropped into the 20's.

The homeless thousands massed on Crowley's Ridge huddled in tents or spent their waking hours in heated public buildings of the area's towns.

Sandbagging crews tried to ignore the cold as they reared higher bulkheads on levees against the Mississippi River's approaching crest.

Matron Loses Plea to Escape Death in N. J. Electric Chair

Mrs. Marguerite Dolbow Must Die With Her Childhood Sweetheart; Accused of Murdering Woman's Husband.

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 2.—A 29-year-old mother who gave up a small fortune and a school teacher's career nine years ago to marry a plodding tenant farmer, lost today her appeal to New Jersey's highest court to save her from the electric chair.

Unless the Court of Pardons intervenes, or the United States Supreme Court orders a new trial on a possible appeal, Mrs. Marguerite Fox Dolbow and her childhood sweetheart, Norman Driscoll, 37, must die for the slaying of Harry Y. Dolbow, the man she married against relatives' wishes.

The once comely Mrs. Dolbow, grown stout in a prison cell, may be the first woman to be electrocuted in the chair which has claimed 119 men in 30 years. The only previous occupant of her cell, Mrs. Hattie Evans, won commutation to life imprisonment six years ago.

The appeal was based largely on the constitutionality of New Jersey's 14-juror law, enacted after illness of a juror in the Bruno Richard Hauptmann trial threatened a mistrial. The defense argued the empanelling of 14 persons, only 12 of whom made a decision, was not a common law jury.

The court denied that calling of extra jurors to prevent a mistrial was in conflict with the fundamental law.

Mrs. Dolbow, mother of an 8-year-old daughter, was arrested after she and Driscoll wept at the grave of her husband, 34, who had been fatally beaten with a steel axle of a farm harrow outside his Mannington Township home the night of August 2, 1935.

The State charged the two slew Dolbow so they could marry and share inheritances of $140,000 which had been withheld for years from the widow because of her marriage to Dolbow.

Cairo Battles As Mississippi Rises Slowly

15 Drowned Near New Madrid; Levee Breaks Again in Tennessee.

By the Associated Press.

Illinois.

Cairo — Meteorologist predicted river would flow at current stage or slightly higher for several days. Engineers estimated water forced through sand strata under the levees had bubbled up in 50 places.

Harrisburg—Ohio backwater covering 80 per cent of town rose slowly. Pneumonia cases increased. Evacuation continued. Fuel inadequate with temperatures below freezing. WPA estimated more than 75,000 persons were homeless in 12 southern Illinois counties.

Missouri.

New Madrid—Mississippi River pressure eased. Residents of half-deserted community cheered by Army engineers' announcement levees would hold. River edged up slightly, but still more than a yard below levee peak. Grappling for bodies in New Madrid-Birds Point floodway continued as Representative Orville Zimmerman, of Missouri, asked an investigation of barge sinking which cost at least 15 lives. Fourteen of the men aboard when scow went down last Saturday still missing.

Tennessee.

Tiptonville — Mississippi broke through Bessie Landing Neck dike for fourth time. Much of Lake County threatened. Boatmen evacuated lowlanders. Tiptonville nearly surrounded by overflow.

Evansville—Red Cross planned to move Indiana refugees to concentration centers. Homeless estimated at 26,650 families. Major industrial plants reopened here and 10,000 returned to work. Cleanup under way at New Albany, Jeffersonville, Lawrenceburg and Aurora. National Guard calculated Indiana damage at $100,000,000.

North Carolina.

Raleigh—Brimming Neuse River menaced Hapersville and colored insane asylum near Goldsboro.

Ten More Bodies Are Recovered

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 2 (AP).—United States engineers announced tonight the recovery of ten additional bodies of levee workers who drowned in a sunken barge in the Birds Point-New Madrid floodway Saturday night, bringing the total recovered to 15.

Fourteen of the levee workers known to have been aboard the barge were unaccounted for tonight, engineers said.

Flood Commission Moves Toward Cairo

New Madrid, Mo., Feb. 2 (AP).—President Roosevelt's flood relief commission tonight moved slowly up the Mississippi River toward Cairo, Ill., and the crest of the overburdened Ohio River.

"All levees we inspected on our trip to New Madrid were in excellent shape and ready for the water in sight," said Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of Army engineers.

Tariffs Lifted On Foreign Aid To Flood Area

Roosevelt Says Emergency Exists; Reports Cheer Officials Here.

While President Roosevelt yesterday was proclaiming an emergency in order that foreign flood-relief supplies might be admitted to this country duty free, relief officials here were receiving encouraging reports on their battle to prevent greater devastation along the Mississippi Valley.

Acting under authority of the tariff act of 1930, the President decreed that an emergency existed by reason of the flood and authorized importation of food, clothing and medical, surgical and other supplies without payment of duty for use in flood relief. Last night orders had been sent to collectors of customs authorizing such importations directed to Federal, State or local governments or charitable organizations engaged in flood relief work.

Canada Comes to Rescue.

The Canadian Red Cross, it was understood, was prepared to send a large amount of such supplies to the American Red Cross, and Canadia radio stations have been accumulating similar extensive stocks for the flood sufferers.

Members of the President's flood committee, meanwhile, were reporting to him in an optimistic manner on conditions in the flood zone. Aubrey Williams, acting WPA administrator in the absence of Harry Hopkins, who is in the Memphis area, said conditions were "not as bad as we thought they would be," though he expressed fear that ew rains might swell the Arkansas and Red rivers, tributaries to the Mississippi.

Gen Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff, said the flood had spread so extensively in the Cairo region that the crest was not so high as had been feared and probably the water would remain at its peak for about three days.

Cheering news was seen also in reports from field engineers by the Geological Survey, Department of the Interior. The reports indicated that while the discharge of waters by the Ohio River where it joins the Mississippi near Cairo will be about 31 per cent greater than during the flood of 1913, it still will be below estimates. The discharge peak was forecast yesterday to reach about 2,100,000 second feet, while in 1913 it had been 1,600,000 feet. Recently, from other sources, the figure for the present flood has been put at about 3,000,000 feet.

Optimism Increasing.

Gen. Craig told reporters his "conservative optimism" about the flood is increasing.

The Army's district engineer at Memphis reported that the St. Francis River basin was flooded to approximately the 1927 level, with the crest flowing southward very slowly. The flow of the St. Francis has an important effect on the lower Mississippi.

The Public Health Service reported that water systems in 94 towns and cities with a combined population of 1,401,756 are entirely out of commission through being submerged by flood waters. In 21 other cities and towns with a population of 207,000, the water systems have been restored to operation.

In places where the systems are out of order, drinking water is being supplied from tank cars or trucks or is being pumped from wells that have been chlorinated.

Health conditions throughout the flood area continue "very satisfactory," the service reported. A slight increase in pneumonia cases is confined largely to aged persons.

Deputies Cheer, Accept French Defense Plans

$874,000,000 Program Aimed to Match German Preparations.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Feb. 2.—A vast program to strengthen France's armed forces over a 4-year period at a cost of 19,000,000,000 francs ($874,000,000) was disclosed to the Chamber of Deputies today by Defense Minister Edouard Daladier.

His speech outlining the plan was cheered wildly and at its conclusion the government was accorded a vote of confidence, 405 to 186, endorsing the national defense policy.

Barrier Extended.

Extension of the concrete and steel "Maginot Line" along the Belgian and Swiss frontiers to stand as a barrier to invasion.

Construction of roads paralleling frontiers to facilitate swift movement of men and materials.

Increases in the size of mechanized army divisions; creation of a corps of 15,000 specialists to strengthen professional shock troops, and more stringent preparation of youths for military service to cope with German's youth-training labor service.

Legislation to create a land, air and naval generalissimo to be under control of national defense ministry committee in time of conflict.

Training Is Planned.

The four-year program outlined today is in addition to the ordinary defense budget and the extraordinary armaments budgets for 1937. These latter two budget allotments call for expenditure this year of a little more than 19,000,000,000 francs, or another $874,000,000.

These projected defense expenditures are scattered through the ministries of air, army and navy, as well as colonial, interior and other departments.

The motion of confidence in the government's defense policy was signed by chairman of the Chamber army, navy and air committees who said their approval was designed to give the vote of confidence "additional significance to Hitler."

Strength Pointed Out.

Daladier cautioned against overestimating the threat of Eastern invasion, declaring "the guns of our fortified lines and our air force could intervene to nail to the ground any attacking formations trying to advance under cover of armored cars."

Another high point in the Chamber's day of drum-rolling was a declaration by Air Minister Pierre Cot that France had increased the number of her first line fighting planes by 37 per cent since last June, material by 67 per cent, munition supplies by 50 per cent and air armaments by 70 per cent.

Leftists applauded heartily when he implied the air force was strong enough to meet any aerial threat by Germany and second among world powers only to the Russian air force.

The French government, the defense minister said, favors full publicity on armaments as one of the best ways to avert war, but "as long as that appeal goes unheeded" France must labor to make her frontiers inviolable.

Suspect Lynched By Alabama Mob

Headland, Ala., Feb. 2 (AP).—A strapping, 18-year-old colored farm hand accused of assaulting a white woman was lynched near here today, the Nation's first lynching victim of 1937.

A sheriff's deputy found the bullet-marked body of Wes Johnson, swinging from a tree in a thicket. Several hours earlier 50 men had stormed the Henry County jail at nearby Abbeville and seized the prisoner.

Sheriff Louis Corbett, who said he recognized some of the mob, indicated a special grand jury would be called to investigate. At Montgomery, Gov. Bibb Graves directed attorney general A. A. Carmichael to conduct an inquiry.

No arrests had been made tonight.

Dr. Riley to Lead U. S. Health Study

Baltimore, Feb. 2 (AP).—Dr. Robert H. Riley, State health director, will have charge of the study of State health facilities of the United States under the auspices of the American Public Health Association.

Dr. Riley said Dr. E. L. Bishop, member of the committee on administrative practice, notified him of the appointment to the chairmanship of the sub-committee. Dr. Bishop is director of health for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The first meeting of the sub-committee will be held in Washington February 15. Its purpose is to learn from the health authorities of each State the various methods of handling health situations and to distribute this information for the benefit of the other States.

Less Than 1,000 Remain in Paducah

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 2. (AP).—Less than 1,000 persons were believed in the flood zone of this "ghost city" tonight as the Ohio River came to a standstill after spreading death and destruction along its winding course toward the Mississippi.

Bitter cold weather favored the continued stand—from 10 a. m. today until tonight the gauge showed no further rise. It was believed the crest had been reached.

Most of the 1,000 remaining were watchmen guarding homes and property.

Mississippi, Louisiana Levees in Good Shape

New Orleans, Feb. 2 (AP).—Officials expressed confidence today that Mississippi River levees in Louisiana and Mississippi would hold when the big river's crest reaches the lower valley.

The dikes were pronounced in good condition in both States.

Former Chief Of A. P. Here Dies on Coast

L. C. Probert Succumbs to Influenza Attack in California.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 2.—L. C. Probert, vice president of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, died in the Good Samaritan Hospital here tonight of complications following an attack of influenza. Before entering the service of the railroad company in 1927, he was for many years chief of the Washington bureau of the Associated Press.

Mr. Probert was 53 years old. The immediate cause of death was given as pneumonia. He was stricken a week ago on an annual business trip here.

Born in Batavia, N. Y., November 18, 1883, Mr. Probert was employed as a locomotive fireman, engaged in engineering and railroad construction and then entered the newspaper business.

He resigned as chief of the Washington bureau to re-enter railroad activity, and was successively vice president of the Erie Railroad, the Pere Marquette and the Chesapeake & Ohio.

There are no surviving relatives. His wife died a year ago. H. O. Bishop, general advertising agent for the Chesapeake & Ohio, who accompanied Mr. Probert here, said tonight his body will be taken to Washington for funeral services. His home was at Homeland Farms, Olney, Md.

Mr. Probert was a reporter on the Buffalo (N. Y.) Express and witnessed the assassination of President McKinley.

He entered the Associated Press service in 1905 and was successively a reporter, news editor and chief of the Washington Bureau. In 1913 and 1914 he was head of the Associated Press staff in Mexico and from 1918 to 1927 was chief of the Washington staff. He accompanied President Wilson to Europe in 1919.

Known to hundreds of newspapermen as "Dick" Probert, his full name was Lionel Charles Probert. He married Miss Adelaide R. Tabor, of Manlius, N. Y., in 1909.

Four-War Veteran Burned to Death; Brother Is Saved

Charles Hunt, 58-year-old veteran of four wars, was burned to death in his two-room shack on Buzzards Point early yesterday. Exploding bullets, souvenirs of Charles' campaigns, saved his brother's life.

Firemen found the elderly man's body charred beyond recognition. The alarm was turned in by Thomas Hunt, brother of the dead man, who fled the house when awakened "by the sound of bullets exploding."

Thomas said the fire broke out about 2:30 a. m. Groping through the smoke, Thomas said he made his way to his brother's room, but found the door locked. He then went for help.

Charles Hunt was in the Boxer rebellion, the Spanish-American War, the World War and the Philippine Insurrection.

The brothers' sister, Gertrude, burned to death in a similar fire 15 years ago in approximately the same location—about 100 yards north of the Corinthian Yacht Club.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow, with burial in Congressional Cemetery at 2 p. m.

Maritime Strikers Prepare to Work

San Francisco, Feb. 2 (AP).—Maritime strikers burned their waterfront picket shacks today and neared the end of their "back to work" vote while ship owners maneuvered for position in an impending race for world markets with their first cargoes in more than three months.

With union membership approval of new working agreements regarded as foregone, the extensive West Coast shipping industry rushed plans for the expected return to work Thursday of 40,000 men who have been on strike since last October 30.

Brisk business awaited every line, particularly those carrying coffee and bananas from South and Central America, sugar and hemp from the Philippines, sugar and pineapples from Hawaii and general cargo from the Coast to the ports of all the world.

River Reversal At Cairo 'Perils' Cigaret Smokers

Residents of flood-menaced Cairo, Ill., are facing a new danger—or at least cigarette smokers in Cairo are—War Department officials jokingly explained last night.

A small stream to the north of Cairo, the Cache River, has been so swollen by flood waters it has reversed its direction; instead of flowing into the Ohio it now flows from the Ohio into the Mississippi. Though it holds no threat for Cairo's safety, some residents have speculated whether the Cache might not divert more and more water from the Ohio, eventually making the Ohio flow to the north of Cairo, in the bed of the Cache, rather than south of the city as at present.

But Cairo's smokers have more than a casual interest in the possible—but not probable—change in Cairo's geography. Were the Ohio to flow north of the city, Cairo would become part of Kentucky and cigarettes would be taxed 6 cents a package under Kentucky's law.

Young Suspect In Davis Kidnap Case Is Grilled

By the United Press.

Willow Springs, Mo., Feb. 2.—State troopers and G-men tonight renewed questioning of a youthful suspect after four witnesses of the kidnaping of Dr. James C. B. Davis, 67, wealthy physician and political leader, viewed the youth.

Throughout the Ozarkian town went the report that the well-liked physician, missing a week today, was dead. The witnesses, however, refused to comment after seeing the suspect.

The suspect was reported to be a rural police character from a neighboring hamlet to Willow Springs. He was taken into custody at 1:30 p. m. and was subjected to a constant hammering of questions during the day and evening.

Two of the youth's companions also were reported to have been subjected to questioning at the troopers' headquarters here, where strictest secrecy was maintained.

Davis' family received one ransom note two days after he disappeared. Efforts to pay the $5,000 ransom asked were unavailing.

U. S. Drops 7,958 Workers in Month

A decrease of 7,958 civil employes in the executive departments and agencies of the Government since December was revealed yesterday in the monthly report of the Civil Service Commission.

While Federal employment throughout the Nation decreased, in the District there was an increase of 1,213 in the past month, according to the report.

There now are 831,095 persons in the entire service. The decrease in employment outside the District was caused primarily by the decline of field work in the War Department, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Works Progress Administration, while the increase in the District was caused primarily by increased activity in the Social Security Board.

Parley on Air Safety Is Set For Tomorrow

Executives, Technicians to Analyze Crashes in D. C. Session.

Technicians and executives representing nearly all the country's air lines, will convene here for a three or four day safety conference under the sponsorship of the Bureau of Air Commerce, Department of Commerce.

The conference was announced in December, when Col. J. M. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, made public a letter to Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, general manager of Eastern Air Lines, asking for a conference to discuss recent air accidents, particularly those on the West Coast during December, and methods of preventing similar crashes.

Primarily, the conference will be devoted to discussion of aviation radio, particularly with reference to its contributions to safety. The agenda for Thursday and Friday call for discussion of static elimination, directional devices, blind flying, radio maps and similar subjects.

Saturday's program, which may be continued through Sunday, includes an analysis of air line accidents, with reference to recent ones, and "ways and means of improving safety in air line travel."

Although most of the discussions will be purely technical, some of the headings suggest openings for general analysis of the whole system of air line regulation. Among the items suggested for consideration are competitive flying, pilots and pilot technique, and dispatchers and supervisory personnel.

Under the heading "Dispatchers and Supervisory Personnel," officials may consider two proposals under consideration in aviation circles:

Transfer of much of the control over air lines to the Interstate Commerce Commission; and Federal handling of dispatching.

Although many air line officials and Air Commerce executives have opposed the suggestion that the Government extend its regulatory functions to include dispatching of commercial planes, several aviation experts have contended it would help prevent air crashes in that Government personnel would observe more strictly weather forecasts and flying conditions.

J. H. Melton Rites To Be Tomorrow

James H. Melton, 84, of 4105 Twenty-first street northeast, a pioneer member of the Army Signal Corps, died early yesterday morning at Providence Hospital.

Born near Chaptico, St. Marys County, Md., on May 19, 1853, Mr. Melton entered the Signal Corps in 1878. He served until 1891. Then he was transferred to the field service of the Weather Bureau. In November, 1893, he was assigned to the Weather Bureau here. He was retired in May, 1923.

Surviving are a brother, Richard Oakley Melton, of this city, and a number of nephews and nieces.

$3,500 a Week Protected Stills, Says Gangster

Testifies at Trial of Three Charged With Making Illicit Liquor.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Feb. 2.—A confessed member of an illicit liquor-making ring testified today as a Government witness in Federal court that the syndicate paid $3,500 a week to protect its stills against raids by Federal agents.

Daniel Davidson, the witness, told Judge W. Calvin Chesnut and a jury that the "protection" money was carried on the syndicate's books as payments for ice.

He was testifying in the trial of three men charged with conspiracy to violate the Internal Revenue laws by operating unregistered liquor stills here in 1934.

The defendants are Charles J. Smith, former prohibition agent of Philadelphia; John J. Skelley, former New York police officer, and Harry Kitt, of Baltimore.

Davidson testified that of the $3,500 "protection" money, $2,500 went to New York through Skelley and that $1,000 went to Smith. Davidson said the payments to local police totaled $500 a week.

Glass Proposes New U. S. Jurist

By the Associated Press.

Senator Carter Glass proposed in a bill introduced yesterday the creation of another Federal judgeship in the Western District of Virginia.

The new judge would relieve Judge John Paul, present Western District judge, of a part of his work in the same manner that Judge Robert N. Pollard, named to a judgeship in the Eastern District created by the last session, relieves Judge Luther B. Way.

Glass said "there is no question that Judge Paul is worked to death and is entitled to some help."

Driver Seriously Hurt When Cab Overturns

Carl Averill, 30, of 35 Adams street, northwest, was in serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night as the result of injuries suffered when his taxicab turned over on the Southern Maryland road near Floral Park yesterday.

Murel Juhl, 23, of 1812 Ingleside terrace, a passenger in Averill's cab, also was in Casualty Hospital with minor injuries.

Viscose Plant Insured.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Feb. 2.—State Senator Aubrey G. Weaver, of Front Royal, who is convalescing from an injury to his shoulder at a local hospital, said today that a policy insuring the title to the site of the proposed Viscose Corporation plant at Front Royal has been issued in the amount of $300,000, the maximum allowed by law. The policy was issued by a Richmond company.

At the same time, Senator Weaver, who conducted negotiations which resulted in the site being secured, said that construction of the large artificial silk plan to employ 5,000 persons will begin at the earliest practical moment.

Social Hygiene Day.

Today is National Social Hygiene Day. In Washington, and throughout the country, physicians and laymen are meeting with public health officers to consider the findings and recommendations of the conference on venereal-disease control held here a few weeks ago.

Precise plans will be considered for local campaigns to stamp out syphilis and to reduce the prevalence of gonorrhea. That this can be done has been demonstrated in other countries, notably the Scandinavian, where fewer than 1,600 new cases of syphilis were found last year. This compares with estimates of a million or more new infections in the United States in the same period. Many States and cities have already begun campaigns in which the recent constructive change in public opinion, to permit direct consideration of the diseases, is proving a considerable advantage. But more must join the fight before any substantial progress can be realized.

There has been a noble response recently to the Red Cross appeals for support in the work of alleviating suffering in the flood zone. It is to be hoped that equal encouragement will greet the directors of the Nation-wide program to protect millions from a more insidious social evil.

What Of The Taxpayer?

In his recent budget message President Roosevelt estimated that, exclusive of debt retirement and adjusted compensation payments, expenditures for the present fiscal year would exceed the comparable totals for 1936 by more than $700,000,000. He was, however, assuming that a supplemental appropriation of $790,000,000 would suffice to cover WPA relief costs and related outlays for the remainder of the year. Since then disastrous floods, like the droughts of last year, have upset computations and made it virtually certain that additional sums will be needed, whether they are voted now or later.

It is when major catastrophes make unexpectedly heavy drains upon the public exchequer that we ought to realize most keenly the folly of a spending program that does not allow for such contingencies. Instead of being an excuse for failure to retrench, they provide the strongest possible argument for eliminating waste in administration and cutting out non-essential expenditures as rapidly as possible. It is the failure to economize when opportunity offers that keeps taxes extremely burdensome when times are good and makes them insupportable when depression comes or sudden emergencies arise.

The necessity of retrenchment is certainly being impressed upon the people of New York State. They are compelled not only to contribute a large share of the revenue collected for Federal purposes but are now confronted with a State budget for the coming year calling for outlays of roughly $1,000,000 per day from the general fund—an increase of nearly $68,000,000 over totals for the present year.

Furthermore, in order to obtain funds to help offset an accumulated deficit, Gov. Lehman presents a tax program estimated to yield $379,000,000. Figures such as these must be considered along with the tax records for municipal governments in order to obtain a clear picture of our fiscal position. We are too prone to discuss the problems of each tax unit as if it could be dissociated from that of others, instead of viewing them all as parts of a complex and related whole.

If the upward trend of Federal outlays were being offset by a steady decline in local impositions, the need to economize would not be so great as it is when all spending agencies are expanding their outlays simultaneously. Unfortunately, studies extending over a period of several years make it clear that our spending proclivities are of long standing—not a product of the depression years. A survey by the National Industrial Conference Board shows that the depression temporarily arrested the rapid upward climb of State and local expenditures but not sufficiently to offset the rise in Federal outlays in evidence since 1927.

The budgetary position of the Federal Government, like that of the Empire State, is undoubtedly greatly improved as a result of better business conditions. In neither case, however, is the outlook promising if the item of expenditures is closely examined. Gov. Lehman looks forward to extinguishing deficits and terminating borrowing for relief purposes next year. But to do so he must retain the present emergency taxes and ask for restoration of a recent cut in the tax on motor fuel. Like President Roosevelt, he has no constructive suggestions to offer as to ways and means to cut costs.

We cannot continue indefinitely to step up local, State and Federal taxes without stopping to reflect upon the ability of the taxpayer to carry the load. Our total governmental expenditures were close to $15,000,000,000 in 1934 and since then they have mounted considerably higher. For a nation with an income of possibly $60,000,000,000 this is a huge and disproportionate sum to spend for public purposes.

To extract it by taxation would be a serious deterrent to continued recovery. To obtain it by borrowing means merely postponing the evil day when budgets must be balanced and meantime adding to the astronomical figures of our public debts.

"No Change By Usurpation."

In his radio address, defending the Supreme Court against those who would lay violent hands upon it, Senator Borah was at his most eloquent and most convincing best.

It was a speech that can well stand comparison with the very finest ever made on the subject of the Constitution and the essential independence of the court as its interpreter. Entirely free of thin emotionalism, it brought the question of the court's essential function back to fundamentals. These have all too often been lost sight of in the past. They are in many quarters lost to sight today.

Not infrequently, as Senator Borah points out, the executive and legislative branches of government have disregarded the guaranties embodied in the Constitution and assailed the court "when its decision failed to sustain their course." Nor, the Senator admits, has the court itself been free of error. It has made mistakes in the past; it will no doubt make mistakes in the future.

But, on balance, as Mr. Borah rightly claims, the court has rendered a great service "to the cause of human liberty, to the advancement of human happiness, and to the maintenance of a government of law rather than a government of men." As he goes on to say: "When war passion, or mob passion, or political zeal, or selfish schemes have carried men beyond reason or justice, the court, when called upon, has interposed to avert great wrongs."

It did so, very recently, in the De Jonge case. It did so previously in the Herndon and Scottsboro cases. It has done so repeatedly since the days of the alien and sedition laws.

Some will say all this is very well. Be it admitted that the court's record in the matter of the defense of civil liberties is good. But has it not also, by its narrow interpretation of the Constitution, prevented action designed to improve the general welfare?

Mr. Borah did not argue the point of whether the Constitution as it stands is either adequate or inadequate to meet the changing needs of the changing times. What he particularly addressed himself to is the growing demand, spurred on by the Roosevelt Administration, to intimidate the court into interpreting the Constitution in line with the executive viewpoint, or, as a vicious alternative, to curb its powers as an instrument of well-planned government.

The time may have come, Senator Borah admits, for the scope of Federal powers to be enlarged beyond those granted in the Constitution. But in that case only evil can result from not meeting the problem honestly through a constitutional amendment rather than by the devious and dangerous process of misinterpretation. For while the court's powers might be curbed so as to permit what may seem a temporary good, the destruction of the court's independence thereby involved can produce in the long run nothing but evil.

There is always the danger that the extended authority beneficently exercised by one Administration may in the hands of its successors be used to destroy the liberties which lie at the foundation of democracy. That sequence is all too familiar to those who know their history.

To gain a temporary end it would be madness to destroy a priceless heritage. Whatever the needs of the moment, it would be suicidal to expand the Federal power, even if that is called for, at the expense of the independence of the Supreme Court. The advice of George Washington—"let there be no change by usurpation"—was never more needed in this country than today.

Shirt Tale.

A month or more ago the wires from Moscow clicked off the news that dress suits had appeared in a shop window in the Soviet capital.

These columns, never lacking in humanitarian instincts, promptly urged the men of Russia to buy up and burn the models with all possible expediency, following this with steps to prevent repetition of the exhibit. For it was also reported that Russian women, on viewing the tuxedoes and tail coats, confessed ignorance as to their use. This, we pointed out, offered the Russian comrades a unique opportunity. By keeping their ladies' minds off such dangerous questions, they might escape the trial of "dressing for dinner tonight, dear" that blights so much of the capitalist world.

The hint, apparently, was not missed. At least recent dispatches carry the report that Moscow's diplomatic corps is in a significant dither. With the winter social whirl nearing the peak, it is suddenly impossible to get a boiled shirt washed and starched. The National Hotel, with the only facilities to handle the wretched devices, has closed its laundry to all such further service.

Behind this refusal it is easy to detect the fine hand of some one who, eschewing rough tactics, has resorted to a devious but effective strategy to safeguard communism's sartorial freedom. At least we hope that is the explanation. Of course, Trotzky may be responsible.

Another Labor Angle.

Still another perspective on the labor problem is being supplied by the Dewey prosecutions in New York City. At the moment, a restaurant racket is under examination. Evidence has been uncovered revealing clearly how a labor union may become a device through which unprincipled leaders can mulct members and, indirectly, the public at large.

The cry has already gone up that Dewey is a hireling of the capitalists and a "union buster." But all evidence indicates that no special bias is needed to detect the rottenness in at least several of New York's restaurant employe organizations. Extortion appears to have been common. So thorough was the intimidation that Jack Dempsey and other well-known and seemingly secure restaurateurs were forced to acquiesce to all demands in silence. Nor has the practice been confined to the restaurant business. Earlier inquiries by Dewey have uncovered evil conditions of similar nature existing in other fields of enterprise in the metropolis.

Dewey is reported to have engaged in this courageous work mainly in the hope that the revelations in New York might stir other cities to ferret out similar rackets in their midst. All, he believes, are loosely but nonetheless certainly connected in a web of crime covering the entire country. The strike which left downtown Chicago without street lights recently was suspected of having a direct tie-up with racketeers of the labor variety. But the presence of labor manipulators there is no novelty.

It seems reasonable that Chicago is not alone with New York in this affliction. But the plight of only these two cities should provide more than enough cause for the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee in the Senate to give attention to the problem. Freedom from intimidation is needed by householders and restaurant patrons fully as much as by employes of big industry.

Unnatural History.

Some recent unnatural history notes have given newspaper readers brief whimsical interludes amid the record of nature's tragedies. They are light fare, yet not unpalatable when consumed with a grain of Attic salt.

But what has this to do with the Williamsburg, Va., undertaker who bought ten ducks last May, put them in the house, and when they disappeared thought the rats had eaten them? Why, nothing! Here we have a plain record of facts. Let's go on with them:

Last week he took up the floor of the hen house and found all ten ducks alive and healthy. For seven months, we are told, they had thrived on the food the rats provided. Oh, yes, and what sifted through the floor.

An English schoolboy equivalent for "spoofing" is "having him on a string." Can it be that rural correspondents have many such tales on their "string" for the delectation of metropolitan readers?

Certainly not! What a shocking thought! The Williamsburg story is clearly one of great scientific value and suggests a very important question:

During that seven months did the ducks never quack?

You get the implication? If you can make ducks quackless that way you can most assuredly make dogs barkless, roosters crowless and babies cryless.

All you have to do is to bury them under the hen house and forget them.

Is the government within its constitutional rights in making us gamble a part of our wages against the long chance that we won't get killed by an automobile before we reach age 65?

Fishing Competition.

From the Boston Transcript.

We read that Japan is a leading competitor of United States fisheries on the Pacific Coast. It may be added that fish caught in the Pacific are sent to cities on the shore of the Atlantic. Modern methods of refrigeration make such journeying possible, not to mention the fish that travel in cans.

New England fishermen are painfully aware of the competition they face from fishermen of other nationalities. The New England industry must meet, in particular, the competition of fishermen who live next door. In the report which the Tariff Commission has just made to the Senate, it is pointed out that Canada aids its fishing industry with bounties both direct and indirect. That is a fact clearly to be taken into account when American tariff schedules are under consideration.

The fisheries are the oldest of New England industries, for visitors from overseas were taking food from the waters before settlers on the shore were planting and reaping the crops on newly cleared fields. New England fisheries have an honorable place in history. That makes it all the more fitting that they should receive full measure of the Government protection and encouragement which they deserve.

Fascism And Militarism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Fascism takes many forms and uses much demagogy in order to disguise its real aims, but the naive propaganda of Charles Fisk Tansill is amazing. Mr. Tansill visited Germany, presumably as an American citizen, and returned with the apparent purpose of tearing down or weakening democratic institutions and theories as a Nazi agent within the borders of a country granting him freedom of speech and asylum that would be denied dissenters in countries governed by Fascist dictators.

America needs more anti-Nazi and anti-Fascist writers if we are to escape the tragic fate of other nations forced into poverty and slavery by the demands of excessive militarism that crushes its own supporters by its cost and isolates its citizens from the friendship and respect of democratic countries by its imperial thievery and unprovoked attack upon peoples and governments outside its own Fascist borders—witness Italy in Ethiopia and Italy and Germany in Spain.

Mr. Tansill fails to realize that even mechanized military units are inadequate to complete maneuvers when the rank and file of the people (and armed forces) are opposed to the objective . . . fascism.

Negro School Plans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The long struggle to obtain adequate recreational facilities for colored youth in the District of Columbia has received a blow in the recommendations of the Budget Bureau to place a junior high school in the Bannelser Recreational Center.

Many school principals have had serious difficulties with unemployed youth beyond the age of compulsory school attendance who endangered the discipline of the school. Some of our high schools now have serious problems protecting girls from taxi drivers and others at recess periods. To place the school on a recreational center is to invite trouble which will result in fencing in a large part of the recreational area and denying the public use of it during school hours.

Would it not be far better to locate the boys' club house on this Bannelser Recreational Center and place the management under the Board of Education ie., the Community Center Department? Better still would be to design the boys' club building as a part of a community building for both sexes but separate from the school building?

More On Nerving Horses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In answer to the letter "Nerving a Horse," signed "A Lover of Animals," I daresay the writer has more love than knowledge of the horse and his various ailments and their treatments. I am also a lover of animals and of the horse in particular, so I shall, in a small way, attempt to explain, to the best of my ability, the difference between "firing" and "nerving" horses.

"A Lover of Animals" would have one believe that they are one and the same. They are not identical. "Firing" is done to stimulate the growth of connective tissue in the weakened leg, and is quite common. "Nerving," on the other hand, is the excising of part of a sensory nerve, and is done for any lameness other than where a growth or obstruction on the leg would make it impracticable. The horse does not suffer. Local anesthetics are administered, and afterward, as the sense of feeling in that leg is gone, the horse could step on a nail and not know it, hence, great care in daily examination of the feet is necessary to check on these conditions.

Horses that have been nerved are unsuitable for polo mounts and for exacting military service. Often there is no other recourse to save a good race horse, and firing and nerving are not illegal treatments. There would be nothing to gain by firing or nerving a horse not lame, and to turn a horse needing this treatment out to pasture "to rest for the remainder of his life," to quote "A Lover of Animals," would not prevent his suffering from the pains resulting from the original condition that caused his lameness—"q. e. d."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Liam Lenihan anent Representative Alfred Noroton Phillips, of Connecticut: "His forebears (sic) came on the Mayflower. They were dour Presbyterians." For cat's sake, how many (if any) of the first Plymouth settlers were Presbyterians?

Hitler's Address.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When announcements from any source are viewed with suspicion and distrust the character of the announcements makes little difference. If they seem of evil import they are proclaimed to be confessions of guilt. If they seem of fair and honest intent they are viewed as cloaks of sinister designs. Thus, all approaches toward adjustment and friendly understanding are barricaded.

Among those who, at this period after the World War, are capable of giving Germany an impartial hearing, it seems difficult to withhold commendation of Chancellor Hitler's address recently before the Reichstag.

If the excellent and realistic address had permitted of pleasantry, the chancellor might have abbreviated his repudiation of the provision in the Versailles treaty which placed on Germany responsibility for the war (a rather childish and needless provision in an accommodation intended to be peaceful) and might have said that Germany would accept responsibility for commencing the war if the Allies would accept responsibility for the way it was ended.

The greatest obstacles to world-recovery have been the outgrowth of the way the war was ended.

G. M. DILLARD.

The Moscow Trials.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to give my commendation for what is the only realistic editorial on the Russian trials that I have seen. Our own history should teach us that the most active revolutionists are apt to be inadaptable to the talks of reconstruction. Both Samuel Adams and Patrick Henry, two of the leaders in agitation for the American Revolution, were unable to cease revolting when the Revolution was successful and bitterly opposed the adoption of the Constitution. Adams, fortunately, was too old to be a serious menace, but those who appreciate his abilities realize that he might have been as serious a menace as Trotsky is to the present Russian government. And Adams and Henry had spent far fewer years in a less violent revolutionary movement than that of Russia.

I am not supporting the Russian government in all that it does and I abhor the wholesale purges, but I can translate this into terms of America and realize that if the Liberty League members had conspired to murder a member of Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet, and succeeded, and had deliberately sabotaged in the steel industry and had deliberately wrecked trains, killing many people—if such had happened I am sure that American public opinion would have demanded the death of the leading members of the Liberty League. There was no mercy for John Wilkes Booth's fellow-conspirators, even though reasonable doubt existed concerning the actual guilt of some of them. Consider the fate of Dr. Mudd, who merely gave medical aid to the assassin.

A Flood Victim On Despair.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read the article of the sailor who is "fed up" with life and offers to sell himself for $1,500.

I am shocked and disgusted to think that there is a person with good health and normal intelligence with such ideas.

I came to Washington to attend the inauguration and while I was here the flood struck the Ohio Valley. My home is gone, everything I possessed, including a lot of valuable books, pictures as well as furniture. The house and garage have been washed away. All of my relations and most of my friends have lost everything.

The city is ruined, there is a shortage of food, very little drinking water and lack of fuel. But I am not "fed up" and neither are my friends. I think I am lucky. When I realize conditions I found myself a position. It isn't much of a one. The hours are long and the pay isn't much but I have a comfortable room, something to eat and a job to occupy my mind.

Of course, I worry. We were all good neighbors down there and shared each others's troubles. It's not for myself that I worry. I am 25, also a girl, but I know I can make my way in the world without any help, but it is those thousands of people who are still in that stricken area in want and who are ill that I think about.

Perhaps John Anderson, jr., hasn't had enough hardship in his life so he doesn't appreciate or know the art of living.

We were just recovering from six years of depression, but during all those dark days none of my friends or relatives were on relief. We went without a lot of things, made our old clothes do, worked for small salaries, but we got along. We didn't lose our faith in God or humanity. The condition became better. People started buying new homes, painting old ones, bought new furniture, cars, etc.

Steel mills and factories were running full time. Most everyone was working and happy.

Then last week this terrible calamity happened. Of course, we are grieved and discouraged, but when the water goes out of the city we will go back to what were once our homes, clean the lots of debris and start some kind of a home again. It will take a long time for the flowers and grass to grow again, and it will take a lot of hard work and years of saving and sacrificing, but we will somehow find the faith and courage to do this. I imagine the parents of John Anderson, jr., are a little ashamed of his attitude and wouldn't want the money.

I hope you print this for his benefit and others who are discouraged.

Fair Enough For Westbrook Pegler

No Column Today.

MRS. WESTBROOK PEGLER called the office to explain why there will be no column by her husband in today's Post.

Mr. Pegler called her from somewhere near French Lick, Ind., and blamed it all on riding a mule while wearing rubber boots, and on the temptation to take a bath—the first since last Tuesday.

His call came to her apartment, she said, about 1:40 a. m., and he told her that the boat in which he and a Coast Guard crew were "doing" the flood areas hit a submerged chimney or the roof of a house near Alton, Ind.

* * * *

Mr. Pegler distinctly does not want to be made out a hero, and he left the impression with his wife that the boat was disabled, but not, as he put it, "wrecked." Anyway, a farmer came by with a canoe and Mr. Pegler and the others borrowed it in order to travel to a farmhouse where they could find a horse.

After a row through the darkness and a 3-mile walk, Mr. Pegler and others finally came to a squalid farmhouse, which, however, was inhabited by some very fine folks. The people there had no horse, but they offered the services of a lame pony.

Since the columnist, according to his wife, had ridden a horse only once before in his life, his 3-mile ride on the back of a mule (which was finally borrowed from another farmer to spare the lame pony) left him fairly limp. He blamed much of his fatigue on the rubber boots he rode in.

* * * *

Finally a man with a car was found. Since it was only 50 miles to French Lick and a bath, Mr. Pegler succumbed to the temptation. He had left all his clothes in Indianapolis six days before. He hadn't shaved since then and he was wearing corrugated corduroy pants, a heavy shirt—and the rubber boots.

"I hate to beg off," Mr. Pegler told his wife, "but my experiences were too much."

Mr. Pegler was in Tell City, Ind., yesterday and will try again to get to Louisville tomorrow, but before that we will probably file a story from French Lick, Mrs. Pegler said.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Is There No Justice?

Scene: The beach at a Southern winter resort in late January.

Characters: A man and wife who have shot the bank roll to escape the rigors of a Northern winter, only to get the news that the mildest winter in years is being enjoyed back home.

He (after meeting a new arrival)—He had to tell me about it, too!

She—About what, Gideon?

He—About the weather back home. Says it was 65 the day he left.

She—I knew by his face he was that kind of a person!

* * * *

He—Here's a letter from Aunt Winnie.

She—Don't open it now.

He—Why not

She—I'm sure it's something about the forsythia hedge blooming. You know how Aunt Winnie is!

He (tearing it up unopened)—The hell with it. Let's not open any more mail. Every letter we get is from somebody who tells how the pansies are up. You'd think they'd have some sense of decency.

* * * *

Newsboy—Hometown newspapers!

She (as Gideon seems about to buy one)—Now, Gideon, you don't want a paper. You know how it affected you when you bought one here yesterday. There was no living with you the rest of the day!

He—Carrying an item about the first robin and the frogs croaking was all right, but why did they have to put it on the first page?

She—If you must buy a paper, buy a local one. It never prints a line about any good weather back North. You never see any mention of Northern weather in a winter resort newspaper unless there's been a terrible blizzard or a general freeze.

* * * *

He—Did you bring the camera?

She—No. What's the use of taking any pictures of ourselves in bathing suits and sending 'em home?

He—(plaintively)—We could take a few and wait until they get a big snowstorm and then mail 'em, couldn't we?

* * * *

He—I suppose we ought to take a philosophical view of it.

She—What! After all we're spending to stay here?

He—Well, what I mean, we're having a good time, ain't we?

She (freezing him with a look)—With all our friends at home nice and comfortable, too! Don't be a hypocrite!

Child Marriage Law?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with much disgust of a 9-year-old Tennessee bride. I ask any loving mother of a tender girl, what right has a big 6-foot, 22-year-old lout to take a 9-year-old child to wife?

Are we living in India, or are we getting to be a Nation of morons? Why do not the thinking people of this great Nation legislate out this child marriage, which is a disgrace to our country? Why not make this the law in all of the States that girls must be 18 and boys 21 in order to marry?

I am sure that in the end there would be less crime, less sickness and less poverty.

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

Pickwick on Paper

By Theodore Hall

I should doubt that Goswell street can be found on the map of the city and borough of London; there is no doubt at all that it lies as clear and luminous in our minds as a spring morning. "That punctual servant of all work, the sun, had just risen, and begun to strike a light on the morning of the thirteenth of May, 1827, when Mr. Samuel Pickwick burst like another sun from his slumbers; threw open his chamber window and looked out upon the world beneath. Goswell street was at his feet, Goswell street was on his right hand—as far as the eye could reach, Goswell street extended on his left, and the opposite side of Goswell street was over the way."

Surely there was never quite such a getting-up-in-the-morning since the world began, such a roll of light drums and tootle of flutes at the rising of a curtain. For the sublime adventures of Mr. Pickwick are about to begin. Lately I have heard of a gentleman who has read—let us be accurate—"The Posthumous Papers of the Pickwick Club," by Charles John Hukam Dickens, annually for some 40 years now. He was a man, surely, who could never get enough of a good thing, and I envy him. And from the moment when Mr. Pickwick descends and enters the cab with the 42-year-old horse, I dare say that faithful reader was laughing. Perhaps before. "I felt myself," says Edmund Gosse in his autobiography of Mr. Pickwick, "to be in the company of a gentleman so extremely funny that I began to laugh before he began to speak . . . I was in fits of hilarity . . . Possibly I was the latest of the generation which accepted Mr. Pickwick with an unquestioning and hysterical abandonment."

• • • •

AND yet John Middleton Murry, 40 years later, is of the same company. "'Pickwick' was the first book I ever possessed . . . I was persuaded that the behavior Mr. Pickwick induced in me at the age of 8 or 9 was a clear proof of a peculiar madness. Even at that age I was half ashamed of it. I used to begin to laugh before I had opened the book . . . And I have never been able to read more than a few pages since then, because the helpless feeling of unquenchable Achaean laughter takes hold of me. I dare not let go my sanity; I am afraid of a second childhood."

As Sam Weller remarked of Mr. Nupkins, magistrate at Ipswich: "There ain't a magistrate going as don't commit himself twice as often as he commits other people;" one is moved to remark that Mr. Murry in his last sentence has committed himself neatly. Forsaking sanity, indeed! But we must forgive him for the sake of a passage of his which I am going to quote in a moment.

And 40 years after Mr. Murry's childhood I trust that Mr. Pickwick is now flourisihng as strongly among us as ever. No doubt there are still homes where he is read aloud of an evening with a choked voice which can scarcely get through the adventure of Mr. Peter Magnus' jealousy, or the Eatanswill election, or the downfall of Mr. Stiggins at the hands of old Tony Weller, or the apocalyptic trial scene itself.

"'What's your name, Sir?' inquired the judge.

"'Sam Weller, my Lord,' replied that gentleman.

"'Do you spell it with a "V" or with a "W"?' inquired the judge.

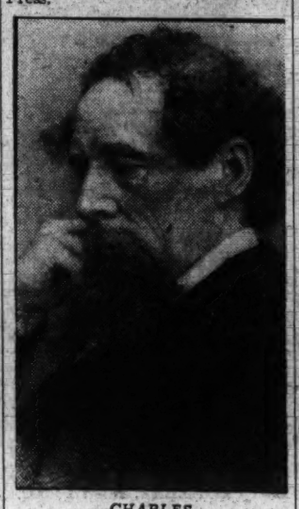
"'That depends upon the taste and fancy of the speller, my Lord,' replied Sam. 'I never had occasion to spell it more than once or twice in my life, but I spell it with a "V."'

"Here a voice in the gallery exclaimed aloud: 'Quite right, too, Samivel; quite right. Put it down a we, my Lord put it down a we.'"

And there it is, the pressed juices and essence of the British comic spirit, so well distilled that it has had half a hundred tomes of learned commentary and the far better tribute of more constant readers than any other work in English, barring the Bible and not barring Shakespeare. Why, even Mr. Westbrook Pegler remarked the other day in print—I think I have the words right—that now and then he still "dipped his beak in Pickwick." That, I feel disposed to say, is commendation.

• • • •

THIS year we have a new edition of "Pickwick Papers" to beguile us. I am just Pharisee enough to thank heaven that I am not as those other Pharisees who cannot read a book unless it is printed in 12-point type and bound in lambskin. Pickwick is Pickwick, however it is printed. But it is pleasant to find these familiar pages in this edition so clearly and handsomely laid before us, set in that most excellent of type faces, Baskerville, and with illustrations by Gordon Ross. The full-color plates seem a bit on the delicate and ethereal side; they do not represent Pickwick proper.' But the black-and-white vignette head-pieces, one to every chapter, are as essential to the spirit of the book as Mr. Pickwick's gaiters themselves. The edition is, save for one blemish, a careful and admirable piece of work, but a small yet odoriferous onion goes to the supervisor who spoiled the otherwise perfect cover by allowing a gold medallion to be stamped thereon which bears no relation whatever with the rest of the cover design. That subtracts just enough from the volume's merit to leave last year's "David Copperfield" as the ranking book, in format, from the Heritage Press.



CHARLES DICKENS.

Once within these pages, it will astonish you how fully there are all things for all men. At one end might be the golden sayings of Weller & Son, of which this sample from old Tony: "Ven you're a married man, Samivel, you'll understand a good many things as you don't understand now; but vether it's worth while goin' through so much, to learn so little, as the charity-boy said ven he got to the end of the alphabet, is a matter o' taste. I rayther think it isn't."

And at the other it might be observed that in 1836-37 Dickens invented the phrase "infant phenomenon," presumably invented that cliche "mental anguish," observed that people said "Ta-ta!" when they parted, and was already acquainted with that darling vegetable of the twentieth century, broccoli. "Vell, young brockiley sprout, wot then?" asks Sam Weller at one point. A small world, as I believe has been said.

• • • •

WHAT kind of a man was it that could produce such a book at 25? You will find much in Bagehot and Swinburne, Gissing and Saintsbury and Maurois. But it is good to recall what Mr. Murry once wrote: "Dickens is a baffling figure . . . People tried to get rid of him by declaring that he was not an artist. It was an odd way of predicating non-existence. Now it is going out of fashion, I suppose because it did not have the desired effect of annihilating Dickens; and also perhaps because simple people asked why the books of a man who was not an artist should have this curious trick of immortality. There was, alas, no answer. So we are beginning to discover that Dickens was an artist, but, of course, only in parts. When we have discovered which are the parts we shall breathe again."

That is worth remembering of a book over which each reader will put up Sam Weller's words as motto: "There's change of air, and plenty to see; and all this suits my complaint uncommon; so long life to the Pickvicks, says I."

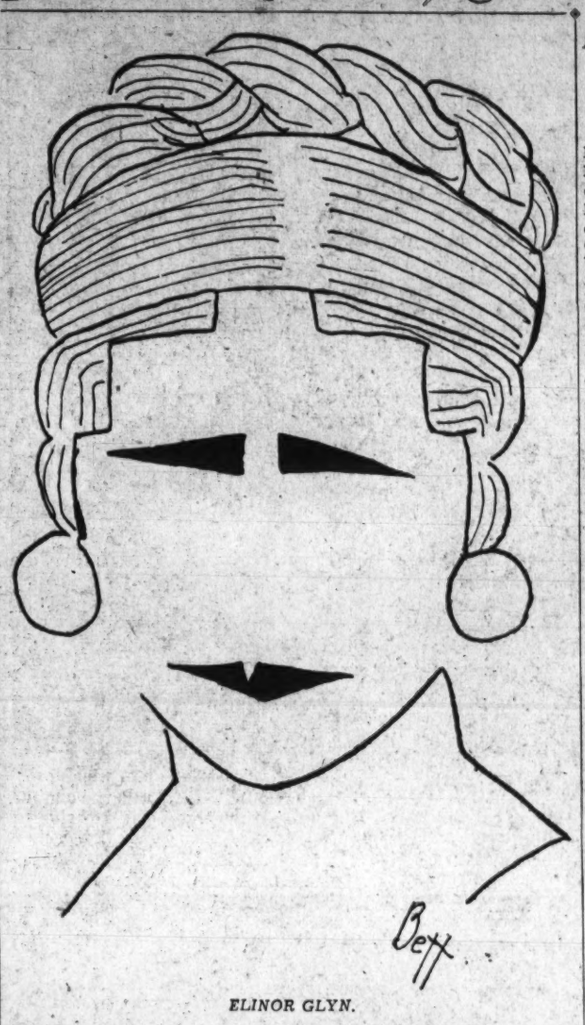
Can a Leopard Lady Change Her Spots?



ELINOR GLYN.

Mrs. Glyn States Belief In Reincarnation As Well As 'It.'

By Elizabeth Ford.

In the early 1900's, Elinor Glyn took America by storm. For a while she was as famous a figure as the Statue of Liberty. More so, perhaps. In her own way, she proceeded to enlighten the world. Young girls, who up to that time had never had designs on anything more important that a piece of embroidery, suddenly became as secretive as chapter before the last in a detective novel. In addition to curl papers, their heads ached from the cranial rigors of having to sleep with "Three Weeks" under their pillows.

Into the unsullied blue skies of the land of the free and the home of the brave—a land that had cut its A B C's on the sterilized teething rings of Harold Bell Wright, James Oliver Curwood, Zane Grey and Alice Hegan Rice—this strange phenomenon flashed with all the tropical brilliance of a neon sign.

Had no one ever heard of Balzac, de Maupassant, Casanova, or even of that much overrated philanderer, Cellini? It seemed not. And yet it called itself a modern age. True, there were such things as wireless, gas-buggies, phonographs with painted horns and peep shows. But on the other hand, there were no corner drug stores where one could pick up a cheap edition of "Droll Stories" or "Moll Flanders" for $1.89. Culture, in our pioneer days, was limited to the few.

Mrs. Glyn tells how she pulled the rabbit out of her hat in her autobiography, "Romantic Adventure." And in doing so, she leaves us convinced that no really good magician ought to give away his tricks. To quote from the record: "I flew to my journal for comfort, and wrote detailed descriptions of love-scenes with an imaginary lover in this idyllic setting (Switzerland). All this I afterward put into 'Three Weeks' . . . My imagination was roused to the worship of Love not by possession of its joys, but by a longing for them." We are not angry, but oh, so hurt. Any sophomore at Glendale High could have done the same thing. (Perhaps the wisest guessed as much then.)

Did all the pages of pulsing asterisks, all the tiger skins mean nothing after all? Alas, publicity, when it is astute, is quicker than the eye. If Henry Wadsworth Longfellow were to rise from his grave and come down to Boston Common and say, "After thinking it over, I no longer subscribe to the idea that life is real and life is earnest," we might be just as disappointed.

Mrs. Glyn is like the heroine in a serial movie. We leave her about to jump from a precipice. We return to discover that she hasn't jumped at all. This technic of headlong hesitation is apparent throughout "Romantic Adventure." Take the chapter entitled, "Looking Back Upon the Naughty Nineties." Now, you say, rubbing your palms together, we are getting somewhere. This ought to be good Glyn.

First of all, she tells us that to her way of thinking, nothing is so degrading as divorce. To nullify the sacred "I do's" of a marriage ceremony, she considers "far more immoral than physical infidelity." You prick up your ears. Yes, indeed, those who follow Bertrand Russell and the path of least resistence in their extra-material relations are to be preferred to those "who fly to the law for release from their moral burden like a child to its nurse."

Brave new world!

But wait a minute. What's this? "Which is not to say that either of these courses (divorce or the other) is right!" And before we can get a lungful of air, we find ourselves in the midst of a decorous paean to the faithful wife. If you think for one instant that "Three Weeks" is a "questionable" book, it is because you didn't read it to the end. There you will see, as Mrs. Glyn reminds us, that the heroine dutifully "pays" and that Karma, the spirit of retribution, is appeased at last. That may be so—but how many people were looking for philosophy? Human nature is frail. And still the royalties poured in on this record-breaking best seller. Did Mrs. Glyn intend that also?

On page one of "Romantic Adventure," she says, "I have kept locked diaries for a great many years" and "I have tried to set down the unvarnished truth." On page two, she tells us, "On looking back at my life, I see that the dominant interest, in fact the fundamental impulse behind every action, has been the desire for romance," and she adds "having made certain that it is not a will o' the wisp, I have tried to hand on my faith to others by means of my books and my films." Perhaps this is good posing, but surely Mrs. Glyn will admit herself that as writing it is—well——

"Romance is a spiritual disguise, created by the imagination, with which to envelop material happenings and desires, and thus bring them into greater harmony with the soul. It is the essence of chivalry, that is, of fine actions inspired by delicate sentiments which are not aroused by thoughts of personal gain, but rather by the impulse to render homage to another."

Relax.

According to "Romantic Biography," Mrs. Glyn grew up in an England full of people with names like the characters in a Frances Hodgson Burnett novel. The Countess of Warwick (Daisy) was one of her friends. Practically a whole chapter is devoted to a detailed description of Easton Lodge—one of the Countess's residences. It sounds a little like "Tour of the Best English Houses, With a Glimpse of Social Manners and Customs." Didn't grandmaw used to have a book like that on the parlor table out in Calliope, Indiana?

Mrs. Glyn ran around in circles—the best circles—in Egypt, Italy, Austria, Switzerland, but not until she reaches her reminiscences of imperial Russia, does she really hit her stride. These chapters are excellent. At the invitation of the Grand Duchess Cyril, she spent the winter of 1910 in St. Petersburg and Moscow. She describes a flirtation with a young Russian officer, a state funeral, and the visit of the King of Bulgaria. Toward the end of the book, her experiences in royalist Spain are equally well told.

Then the war—in which hectic Paris is pictured. And then the movies. Unquestionably, Elinor Glyn, at one time, was one of the leading figures under the Hollywood tent and this portion of her memoirs should have been possibly the most interesting of all. Except for a few keen remarks on the shirt-sleeve tactics among the directors of those days, her descriptions of other outstanding persons with whom she came in contact sound like the stereotyped hand-outs of a publicity agent. She doesn't seem to get any closer to Clara Bow, her hand-raised protege, than the other side of the street. And she must have known Clara Bow well.

In still another chapter, she sets forth her belief in re-incarnation and its theory of life-repeating souls. Required reading, if you lean yogi-ward. A state of mind if you don't.

In her chapters on America, she speaks particularly of the outward indifference of American men toward the finer subtleties of romance, although she is sure that they are sincere. She deplores America's almighty dollar—so that when she returned to England, she turned all of hers into pounds.

Farther on, she speaks a little bitterly of the hostility of recent British criticism toward her work. True, through ill-advised ventures into English films, she suffered financial losses but these at this date have all been recouped. The final photograph in the book is entitled "Mrs. Glyn, 1936." It shows her seated on a Louis Quinze sofa in a fin de siecle drawing room. On the floor are three tiger skin rugs. And at the back, French windows are securely closed against—London fog. So, wag, tongues, if you dare!

In all fairness to Mrs. Glyn and her publishers, it should be mentioned here that the book which seems to have been handled the most of all the books in the open shelf alcove of the staid Library of Congress, is this one—"Romantic Adventure."

Consult the oracle at Delphi. There may be an answer.

Windmills

Everything from professors of English to Siamese cats is discussed in this new book of articles and essays, "everything" including such topics as newspaper prose, bishops of the church, fraternity men, deans of women, Kansans, rural poets.

Those who expect to find any deep or stirring notes will be disappointed in "We Liberals." These articles make pleasant entertainment without moving the reader to any new decisions. Mr. Crawford gladly gallops around the windmills he has discovered in American life—pointing out their peculiarities—but not for him is the direct charge into the blades of the machine.

For the past eight years Mr. Crawford has been editor of Household Magazine, but none of these pieces are credited with appearing there. One or two have been published in the American Mercury; others in Plain Talk, Quill, The Psychoanalytic Review, and the Kansas Magazine. Neither as biting as Mencken or as charming as Christopher Morley, these essays are nevertheless above the average for magazine articles.

DAN TERRELL.

Street-Car Literature

"WINDOW IN HEAVEN," by Margaret Bell Houston. (D. Appleton-Century, $2.)

A light little romance about a girl and boy who planned a dream house only to have a third angle of the eternal triangle rear its ugly head and blow the house down. You can read it in the time it takes you to go to and from work over three days' duration.

"Love I Dare Not," by Allene Corliss. (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.)

Full of phrases such as "the most carelessly beautiful woman I have ever known," still this is an interesting love story set against the backdrop of New York's theatrical scene. From the first sentence to the happy ending is a long Capital Transit ride from the Bureau of Standards to the Capitol and back.

"Barren Metal," by Naomi Jacob. (Macmillan, $2.50.)

A really fine novel about Rachel and Meyer Pardo who are happy together with their children until Meyer starts making money. Big business is the villain; Meyer gets sent to prison; Rachel finds love elsewhere, and all's well that ends well on the last page. This will take you at least a week to read even if you live in the suburbs.

Thrills by the Carload

"EMPEROR OF EVIL," by Carroll John Daly. (Stokes, $2.)

For those who like their thrills by the carload, "Emperor of Evil" may help to while away a quiet hour or so. There are approximately ten deaths by violence and six attempts at murder. (These figures are not guaranteed. One or two might have been overlooked.) Something happens all the time.

Nonetheless, while packed with events, the book is distinctly uninteresting. The plot is threadbare and the characterization poor. It is not a detective story in the generally understood sense of the phrase and the reader does not even have the fun of attempting to solve a puzzle.

There is a love interest of sorts. The blackmailer lavishes what starved affections he has on cats. Detective Vee Brown has his Dr. Watson in the person of an ex-newspaperman who is almost phenomenally stupid. The book is full of sentences like "They're all yellow when the smell of burning flesh is in their nostrils."

However, it is harmless enough and quite suitable for those who like to read about men crawling around in abandoned houses and wholesale murder.

Symphony of Minds

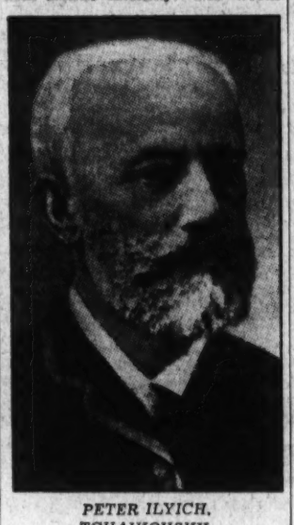
By Audrey Walz

GREAT men are sometimes better met in their letters than elsewhere, especially if those letters are written to a woman. George Bernard Shaw revealed a wholly delightful side to a personality not always attractive in his letters to Ellen Terry. Horace Walpole painted himself as a self-conscious dandy in his correspondence with the aging, blind Mme. du Deffand whose devotion he feared would make him ridiculous before his world. And nowhere can the composer Tchaikowsky be seen more clearly than in his letters to Mme. von Meck, the Moscow grande dame who kept him in comfort for nearly fifteen years.

Together Catherine Drinker Bowen and Barbara von Meck pieced out the story told by these letters—and the story back of that story. The widow of Nadejda von Meck's beloved grandson, Barbara von Meck was in a position to supply factual background for the fantastic epistolary romance between Tchaikowsky and his benefactress. Mrs. Bowen, whose literary manner in her small book, 'Friends and Fiddlers," won her many admirers, interprets the relationship with all kindness and sympathy.

• • • •

THE story needs to be told with kindness. Otherwise it could scarcely be comprehended. For 15 years, Tchaikowsky and his Nadejda Philareovna corresponded with frantic intensity. For weeks on end, they wrote daily, sometimes twice a day. To Mme. von Meck, the composer confided his moods and money troubles, his happiness and hysterics, everything but the one dominating secret of his life. She, in her turn, expounded to him her philosophy, her views on music and art and marriage. But most of her attention she gave to the one subject that ruled her mind during the years of their friendship — Tchaikowsky himself. They filled pages with expressions of love and mutual gratitude.



PETER ILYICH. TCHAIKOVSKY.

Yet the two intimates-by-mail never met. Only once during their years of "closeness" were they face to face, and that meeting was accidental and culminated in a wordless bow before they hurried along their separate ways. This is all the more remarkable because the Widow von Meck not only gave the composer a substantial pension and other money gifts, but rented apartments for him near her place of residence at the moment, and with her own hands arranged those apartments. The mutual isolation becomes all the stranger when one reads that Tchaikowsky followed the von Meck entourage to Florence, to Paris, to her country place in Russia, Brailov, in order to be "near" her. To avoid meeting under such circumstances, they had to keep each other constantly informed.

When Tchaikowsky came to occupy a farmhouse on her huge estate, he found everything in readiness for him, and a letter of greeting which said, among other things:

"If you need anything, I beg you to ask your servants; your usual staff will be at hand. I hope you will drive and walk in the forest and have tea served anywhere you please. There are so many of these forests that we shall not disturb each other; moreover, we can arrange beforehand who will go to which place. But because I know how particular you are about this, I shall inform you every morning where we intend to go on the day following."

Even so, Tchaikowsky was not entirely satisfied with his benefactress' plans for his solitude, and wrote his brother:

"I am so used to thinking of Nadejda Ph. as a kind of faraway, invisible angel that the consciousness of her near and mortal presence is disturbing."

And the lady was two miles away!

TCHAIKOWSKY'S attitude is understandable only in terms of his abnormality, which he identified in his letters to his brother with a guilty and italic "The." He lived in constant terror that his peculiarity would be revealed, and shunned society. When he came to believe that rumors on the subject were current in Moscow he adopted the desperate—for him—expedient of a marriage-in-name-only. But the stupid and commonplace girl who was to take part in his disguise proved affectionate, and Tchaikowsky fled in terror. The experience made the most casual social contact with women unbearable for him, and Mme. von Meck, too, was kept at a distance.

Never, apparently, did Nadejda Ph. learn the reasons for the composer's desire for seclusion. A strait-laced Victorian, she found his avoidance of women evidence of virtue. As for his avoidance of her, that, too, was agreeable to her at first. When Tchaikowsky was first brought to her attention by Nicholas Rubinstein, Mme. von Meck was a recluse who saw only her family and servants. Later she would have been more than willing to meet her musical protege face to face, but she was aware of his reluctance by that time, and willing to comply with his wish.

Her compliance made much of Tchaikowsky's music possible. She freed him from an enslaving conservatory job, and with the funds from her hand, he was likewise freed from most human contacts. He was able to fly from his "bride" from the demands of Rubenstein, from all but a select coterie. Undisturbed, a phantom bearing none of the burdens of reality, he turned out his most famous symphonies. Her money, too, helped to buy them a hearing in western Europe, which was inclined to consider all Russian music barbaric in that day.

IN other hands, this romance between "an invisible angel" and a phantom might have been made ridiculous or disproportionately strange. Mrs. Bowen's sane and sympathetic treatment makes it understandable in terms of character—the only key to understanding. Even those who have no interest in music or its makers will find the relationship, as the book unfolds it, one of absorbing interest. To Tchaikowsky's admirers, some of the material may come as a shock. But light is better than the dusk of mystery which has dimmed the outlines of the man until now.

He gains interest as a personality by the very revelations which he feared through his life, and emerges somehow lovable, in spite of his weakness and hysteria. Even those who resent the sobbing and self-pity they hear in his music will find that the man had his attractive moments—with children, who loved their Uncle Petia; as a critic of his own music, which he regards with admirable objectivity, and, when finally the relationship with Mme. von Meck came to an end as fantastic as its entire course. Though he never knew what prompted her summary dismissal of her pensioner, he behaved with dignity and restraint and refused to display curiosity or weakness. In a little while he was dying horribly of cholera, and on his death bed, too, showed more strength than he had in much less difficult circumstances. A strange man, and his story makes fascinating reading.

"BELOVED FRIEND," the story of Tchaikowsky and Nadeja von Meck, by Catherine Drinker Bowen and Barbara von Meck. (Random House, $3.)

Charmed Life

"WOMEN CALLED WILD," by Rosita Forbes. (Dutton, $3.)

Miss Forbes writes a story of weird and far-off places, as episodic and uneven as a fruit cake. Using every device to shock and horrify her reader, the author, as a female Richard Halliburton, only succeeds in making the reader indifferent, reading about multiple atrocities incessantly recurrent, with a calm blandness, even though Miss Forbes sends barbed word after word, and un-Occidental thought after thought darting from her pages.

She doesn't make the reader care about the fates of her innumerable victims, nor even, since she seems to lead a completely charmed life, about her own fate, as it is already obvious that she returns from it all to lecture in England and America about her wanderings.

For 317 pages the reader winds through pig-stys, vermin, slave-trading, torture and cruelty, nakedness, massacre, starvation, filth of every description, with which (the descriptions) Miss Forbes glibly obliges, jungles, mountains, battles, intrigue, murder.

Play in Book Form

"HIGH TOR," by Maxwell Anderson. (Anderson House, $2.50.)

Most people who have and exercise an ability to read are already somewhat acquainted with this latest work from Mr. Anderson's prolific pen, thanks to its recent debut on Broadway.

However, it may be said in addition that "High Tor" is quite as excellent a reading play as it is reputed to be an acting play. In fact, its appeal is definitely of the read-at-one-sitting variety. The plot combines an up to the minute business deal story, a modern romance between two present-day people, the interrupted flight of several bank robbers, the dilemma of a company of seventeenth century wraiths from Holland who were undoubtedly Rip Van Winkle's original bowling companions, and the end of the Last of the Mohicans (or the Senecas or whatever tribe once inhabited the banks of the Hudson). Surely such a layout is enough to whet one's literary appetite when coupled with the knowledge of Mr. Anderson's deft handling of the English language and the beautiful cadence of his blank verse.

Steel Rails

"END OF TRACK," Reminiscences of James H. Kyner, as told to Hawthorne Daniel. (Caxton Printers, Ltd., $3.)

Rolling swiftly along in the comfortable, modern equipment of the Capitol Limited over a roadbed smooth as a city street is an excellent way in which to review and appreciate the memoirs of a pioneer railroad builder. This particular volume effectually stilled any restlessness which traveling alone might otherwise have induced.

Mr. Daniel has chronicled Mr. Kyner's narrative in a simple, graphic manner, putting it in the first person, and the book is attractively printed and copiously illustrated with reprints of photographs half a century and more old. An Oregon historical association saw fit to accord it high honors long in advance of publication.

"End of Track" defines and follows that progressing point at which the steel rails await the grading, tunnelling, bridging and ballasting ahead which will permit their steady advance to open up new and hungry country.

Mr. Kyner, safely pastured in his nearby Maryland home, may indeed be proud of a valuable life well lived and well recorded.

U. S. Neutrality Plan Is Signed By 31 in House

Joint Statement Blankets Proposals Already Introduced.

A peacetime Congress continued to prepare to deal with war abroad yesterday, as 31 members of the House signed a joint statement that virtually blanketed the proposals already introduced with intent to keep the country free of wartime entanglements.

The joint House statement recommended:

Cash-and-carry neutrality, wherein belligerents can buy non-war materials if they pay "on the line" and carry the goods away in their own ships.

Equal application of embargoes to all warring countries.

Banning of war-zone travel by American ships or citizens, or travel of Americans on belligerents' boats.

Embraced in the statement were portions now found in individual bills already introduced in Congress. Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, now have their own proposals before their committees, to meet this week, which are considered closest to the Administration's desires for discretionary-type legislation.

Senate Gets Measure.

A measure planned to accompany the mandatory neutrality measure introduced Monday by the Senate bloc of Gerald Nye (Republican), of North Dakota; Homer Bone (Democrat), of Washington; Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and Bennett Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, was placed before the Senate yesterday. This bill would rule out war profits drastically, conscript industry and place rigid Government control over money and materials in wartime, with all incomes over $10,000 a year virtually confiscated. Senator James P. Pope (Democrat), of Idaho, was an additional signer of the latter measure.

A bill similar in effect was introduced Monday by Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

Hearings on the neutrality proposals will come later this week, it was announced yesterday. H. Green Hackworth, State Department solicitor, will be called by the Pittman committee.

Over A Half Million Dollars
In Savings
To Our Consumers

For the thirteenth consecutive year the rates of the Potomac Electric Power Company are reduced, effective February 1, 1937.

These reductions in rates will result in a saving to our consumers of OVER A HALF MILLION DOLLARS during the year 1937. In addition, it is apparent that increased use of electricity at the new lower rates will effect additional savings.

The reductions made in the residential rates to our consumers in the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland will prove particularly attractive to those who use electric refrigerators and ranges. To such users the reduced rates make possible a saving of over $4.00 per annum in their bills for electricity.

That these yearly rate reductions are appreciated by our consumers is evidenced by their ever-increasing use of "Matchless Service." These extremely low rates are a substantial contribution to the greater convenience and freedom from laborious tasks brought about by the use of time and labor-saving electrical appliances in the home, the store and the factory.

'Pauper's Oath' Delays Action On Relief Bill

Carolina Senator Would Require Communities to Certify Needs.

By Robert C. Albright.

An unexpected move to require a virtual "pauper's oath" of States, cities or counties receiving Federal relief allotments yesterday took Senate leaders by surprise and forced adjournment of the chamber without final action on the Administration's $934,725,868 deficiency relief bill.

An amendment, denying Federal aid to communities which failed to show their own local resources are exhausted, was offered by Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, as the Senate prepared to pass the emergency relief measure after beating down major alterations.

Would Certify Needs.

Under the Bailey proposal, Federal relief could be granted only after States and local subdivisions had certified their tax rate, income, indebtedness, budget and number of unemployed, and obtaining a finding by the Government that each was "in actual need of the aid of the Federal Government to provide for its unemployed."

Earlier, the Senate had heard Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson urge necessity of a "gigantic" national flood control plan, but warn the task cannot be immediately undertaken "because the aggregate amount, if appropriated at one time, would undermine the national credit unless other essential and indispensable activities be abandoned or discontinued."

Congress "Awake."

"The Congress is keenly awake to the flood control problem," said Robinson. "There will not only be provision made for various forms of relief to flood sufferers, but ways and means must be found for going forward with permanent flood control."

Robinson's pronouncement followed a statement by Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, Monday, that he will introduce an Ohio River Valley flood control measure, contemplating $2,000,000,000, in dam and reservoir construction.

On assurances from Administration quarters that supplementary appropriations will be asked later to cope with the flood emergency, and that "every cent" of relief funds in the deficiency bill will be used for that purpose if needed, the Senate, without a record vote, defeated an amendment by Senator Homer T. Bone, of Washington, to add about $400,000,000 to the bill.

Senators Take Walk.

Bone was supported by a dozen Northwestern and Midwestern Senators, but his bid for an increased appropriation collapsed when flood-bloc Senators, led by Barkley, walked out on the proposal after receiving promises of later Administration assistance.

Earlier, a slash of $15,000,000 in the Resettlement Administration's share of the $790,000,000 relief appropriation was restored to the bill. The committee's recommendation of a decrease was defeated by a 42-to-36 record vote, with Democrats sharply split.

Asks RA Inquiry.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, offered a resolution for an investigation by a committee of four Senators of Resettlement policies and operations.

The proposed $15,000,000 cut in Resettlement's relief allotment recommended $14,000,000 be trimmed from subsistence homesteads and $1,000,000 from P.A.'s Washington administrative expenses. With Robinson's agreement, the Senate later adopted an amendment lopping the $1,000,000 for administrative expenses from the RA allotment, but permitting the $14,000,000 for subsistence homesteads to stand.

Compromise Negotiated.

Unanimously, the Senate agreed to a compromise on the committee's proposal to deny Congressional committees use of WPA employes as "expert" help in committee investigations. Under the compromise, Congressional committees will be permitted to continue to use departmental help, but must report to Congress monthly on the number of such workers employed and their salaries. A traditional $3,600 limitation on salaries of investigators was stricken from the bill, on an amendment by Bone.

Bailey offered his amendment requiring State and local subdivisions to prove their own inability to provide for their unemployed before Federal aid can be given, as the Senate was making ready for a final vote on the bill. Robinson, caught unawares, immediately asked that the debate go over until noon today.

Flood State Senators and Representatives meanwhile were negotiating for legislation to supplement direct flood relief provided in the bill, with special legislative provision for Federal home and furniture rehabilitation loans and grants. Once the immediate flood emergency is met, they will move for a long-time flood control program.

U. S. Ambassadors Forbidden To Wear Silk Knee Breeches

Roosevelt Executive Order Bans Uniforms Not Authorized by Congress; Recalls Harvey Regime, Scorn of Dawes.

By Sidney Olson.

No more may the ripe calves of American diplomats' legs gleam in silken splendor at the courts of kings.

Gone the glamor of knee-breeches; gone the delicately starched ruffle; farewell, buckled shoes.

President Roosevelt ended it all yesterday. He signed an executive order banning the wearing by diplomats of any uniform or official costume not authorized by Congress.

The action, falling like a guillotine on the hopes of the younger career-service men of the State Department, whose legs are reminiscent of John Barrymore's Hamlet, came as a boon to portly politicians with one eye on an embassy job and another on their keg-size ankles.

The blow came in a brief order announced by the State Department yesterday.

The general reaction was relief. Oldsters recalled the Harvey situation, the Dawes situation and the Mellon situation. All were Ambassadors to the Court of St. James in London. George Harvey wore the "silk golf-pants," as they have been inelegantly termed; Andrew Mellon wore trousers when he was invited anywhere as Mr. Mellon and breeches when he was invited as Ambassador Mellon; and Charles G. Dawes said tersely, "Hell, No!" when asked if he would display his Dietrichs at court.

Today there is no comparable situation. Robert Bingham, our present Ambassador at London, bends the knee to no man, especially in breeches, and maintains the dignity of the United States in what Westbrook Pegler calls "sugar-scoop coats, pencil-stripe pants and spats."

But the crux of the new development, coming as it does in a time of international unrest, is that henceforth American citizens need not fear titters of Old-World courtiers if an Ambassador should unveil a pair of Chippendale legs. Secure in the sanctity of trousers, henceforth the foreign servants of this country can negotiate and confer with poise and aplomb, unafraid of a run in their hose.

None of our present corps affects a uniform, and the regulation merely standardizes the status quo, but the fear of the future is banished. No more need Presidents bear in mind the shape of a jobseeker's "gams" when casting about for a diplomat.

Nevertheless, something is gone from the diplomatic scene—some touch of elegance, some hint of past glories—of the days when our diplomats were gold-braided and be-sworded; with bright red waistcoats and black cockade hats.

No more will a freckled American fist protrude from lace cuffs—no more the knobby Midwestern knee be draped in silk.

Noted Jesuit Writer Died of Heart Attack in N. Y. Hospital.

Funeral services will be held this morning at 9 o'clock in St. Joseph's Chapel, at Worcester, Mass., for the Rev. Michael J. Earls, S. J., former vice president of Holy Cross College, who died of a heart attack in a New York hospital Monday.

Father Earls, noted as an author and for two decades professor of English literature at the college, was stricken in the Grand Central Terminal in New York as he was on his way to the Middle West to address sectional alumni meetings as faculty representative.

A native of Southbridge, Mass., near Worcester, where he was born 63 years ago, Father Earls graduated from high school, then went to work in the mills. He taught night classes and worked his way through Holy Cross, where he was graduated in 1896. He came to Georgetown University for a post-graduate course and managed the varsity basketball team while here.

He then studied in France. Returning to this country, he entered the Jesuit novitiate at Frederick, Md., and was ordained to the priesthood in 1913 by Cardinal Gibbons in Baltimore.

Father Earls was a prolific contributor of articles, poems and occasional stories to the magazines.

Among his better known works are "Ballads of Peace and War," "In the Abbey of the Woods," "The Road Beyond the Town" and "Under College Towers." His latest work was "Hosting of the King."

Clean Slate Given To Deane-Tanner In Film Mystery

Los Angeles, Feb. 2 (AP).—Fifteen years after the mysterious death of William Desmond Taylor, film director, Mrs. Ada Deane-Tanner obtained today an official opinion that her former husband, Dennis Deane-Tanner, had no connection with the case.

She said she believed Taylor and Deane-Tanner were brothers.

Taylor was found shot to death in his apartment February 2, 1922. During investigation of his death, detectives received an anonymous letter stating Dennis Deane-Tanner and "Edward Sands," the director's valet, who disappeared after his body was discovered, were the same man.

District Attorney Buron Fitts examined samples of handwriting and photographs of Deane-Tanner and Sands today and asserted "it seems to be safe to say that Dennis Deane-Tanner is not the man we are looking for."

Farm Tenancy Delay Favored By House Unit

Poll Indicates Committee Awaiting Plans on Crop Control.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

A poll of the House Agriculture Committee yesterday showed pronounced sentiment for delaying action on farm tenancy legislation until more is known of the Administration's plans for production control.

Fully half the committee members, expressing themselves privately as hearings on the $500,000,000 Bankhead-Jones tenancy measure moved into the second week, appeared reluctant to approve it in view of the agricultural outlook.

The bill would provide low-interest, long-time loans to renters and sharecroppers for purchase of their own farms. The Senate passed it last year but the House failed to act. The Administration hopes State legislation on farm leasing will accompany the Federal program.

"It seems we're putting the cart before the horse," said Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, who ranks next to Chairman Jones on the House committee.

The question of Constitutional amendment complicates the situation. Farm leaders have taken the position that, despite the Supreme Court decision against AAA, production control can be effected by simple amendment to the soil consevation act.

The "every normal granary" was discussed by Wallace in a radio talk today. He called it a necessary supplement to the present farm program, in which he asked co-operation of all farmers.

He said the conservation program for this year was planned to fill up "bins and granaries" if the weather was normal, or provide ample feed and food if there were another drought.

The Secretary said the National farm conference he called here for next week would discuss problems involved in setting up machinery that would safeguard supplies in the event of favorable weather and prevent price collapse in event the weather was favorable.

Tokyo's Small Cabinet Evokes Wide Criticism

8-Member Body Installed; Saito Not Offered Post of Foreign Minister.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Feb. 2.—The decision of Japan's new premier, Gen. Senjuro Hayashi, to name only eight ministers for the 13 cabinet posts, and especially his failure to name a strong foreign minister, evoked criticism in foreign office and political circles tonight.

The new cabinet, with Hayashi holding three posts and three others having two each, was installed formally by Emperor Hirohito in a brief ceremony early today. This ended a 12-day political crisis.

The small cabinet was in keeping with the army's demand for concentration of administrative authority in fewer hands.

Critics of Gen. Hayashi asserted thus far he has not approached Hiroshi Saito, Ambassador to Washington, or any other diplomat abroad with an offer of the foreign portfolio, which he assumed himself, together with the premiership and the education portfolio.

Policy Data Asked.

These critics asserted Gen. Hayashi will not be able to devote sufficient time to Japan's pressing problems abroad. Moreover, they said, he has no experience in foreign affairs.

For several years the political parties, which stand outside the new cabinet, but have promised neutrality for the time being, have demanded a definite, fundamental foreign policy which will make it clear whether the empire is to pursue a warlike or a peaceful course.

If it is to be peaceful, the party leaders argued, Japan's huge budgets, with nearly half the appropriations going to the army and navy, are unnecessary. If it is to lead to war the people would be prepared to make any sacrifices necessary, but they want to know.

However, the Hayashi cabinet was generally welcomed as a moderate compromise between the extreme pro-Fascist element of the army and the democratic civilian political forces. The busines world especially welcomed appointment of Toyotaro Yuki as finance minister, expecting him to promote financial stability.

PowerCo-operative Danger Is Forecast

By the Associated Press.

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator, yesterday saw "evidence of a wall co-ordinated utility program to cripple co-operatives" in the moves to place co-operatives under regulation similar to that imposed on private power companies.

Kentucky recently enacted such legislation, he said, and similar proposals impend in Illinois, Arkansas, Nebraska and Virginia. Few States have the law in question.

Field workers of the REA, in conferenie here this week, planned to consider means of combatting the control. Co-operatives subject to regulation have to meet higher financial requirements to get loans.

Art Prizes Awarded.

Secrecy Veils Kin's Efforts to Ransom Doctor

Contact With Kidnaper Fails, But Officials Admit Receiving Note.

By the Associated Press.

Willow Springs, Mo., Feb. 2.—Tight-lipped investigtors concentrated tonight on the safe return of Dr. J. C. B. Davis, 67, kidnaped physician and leading citizen, to his family, from whom $5,000 ransom has been demanded.

Dr. Davis disappeared a week ago after leaving his office with a stranger who asked him to make a professional call.

After confirming that the physician's family received a note in his own handwriting last Thursday morning, stating the abductor's demands, State Patrol Chief B. Marvin Casteel declined to discuss progress of investigations.

Contact Efforts Fail.

It was known, however, that unsuccessful efforts were made last Saturday night to meet the ikdnaper and pay the ransom.

It also was known that State police held and questioned a man in the city jail today.

Dr. Davis' medicine case, which he carried when he departed with the stranger whom he called "Mr. James," was found in the North Fork River, 15 miles southeast of here, last Friday. Despite the omnious discovery, members of the physician's family expressed confidence he would return unharmed.

Dr. Davis' brisk, wiry figure is almost a landmark here. In 35 years of activity as a general practitioner, he has attended most of the town's 1,500 residents—has ushered into the world a good proportion of its younger generation. He has participated vigorously in local politics and civic undertakings.

Well Known to Residents.

The man was described as about 25 years old, around 5 feet 8inches tall and weighing about 135 pounds. The observers said he wore a leather jacket with slide fastener and dark trousers.

While the exact wording of the ransom note was not made known, it was reported to demand $5,000 in currency in a packet of four $1,000 bills, nine $100 bills and five $20 bills.

Dr. Davis is reputed to be prosperous, but not wealthy.

Selection Board Meets.

A selection board, to choose paymasters for the grade of captain and lieutenant commander, convened yesterday morning the Navy Department announced. Presided over by Capt. Trevor W. Leutze, Supply Corps, the board will not make its recommendations for another ten days.

Grayson Lacks Fare; Red Cross Benefits

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the national Red Cross, yesterday rode to his office in a taxicab and then found he didnt' have 50 cents in change for the fare.

The admiral later saw to it that the Red Cross got the 50 cents, and the driver got a similar sum.

Soul Pictures Slightly Annoy Coast Reporter

Specialist in Technique Bans Checkered Suit and Black Cigar.

By the United Press.

Hollywood, Feb. 2.—"The soul is a nudist—hamper it with hair, make-up or clothing and it vanishes," said Mrs. Rowena Thom Rathbone, Socialist "soul photographer" of the Los Angeles Junior League.

It was a big disappointment to this column, which had hoped some day to have it's soul photographed in a checkered suit, and smoking a black cigar.

Mrs. Rathbone exhibited a photograph of Merle Oberon's soul, illustrating her point to a detail. Miss Oberon's soul was 100 per cent unhampered.

Hays' office could hardly object, however, for Miss Oberon's soul picture was what press photogs call a "mugshot," and resembled a seven-eighths eclipse of the moon. If any part of the soul lives south of the Adam's apple, it isn't recorded by Mrs Rathbone's candid camera.

"Essence" Remains.

Mrs. Rathbone worked out soul-shooting technique with Robert W. Coburn, crack Hollywood lens artist—a complicated system of lighting which eliminates a shadow make-up, hair, clothing, jewelry, or anything else chancing between soul and lens.

"What remains is the essence, or perhaps the quintessence of the personality—a life mask in short," Mrs. Rathbone explained. "It fascinates me. We are still developing the technique."

Astaire, Rogers and Hoctor.

Harriet Hoctor, No. 1 American ballerina, has been signed by RKO-Radio to match leaps and postures with the tapping of Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers in their new picture, which hinges on a ballet school. It will be Hoctor's second picture. She topped the ballet sequences in "The Great Ziegfeld."

Hitting a new high for something Edmund Lowe bought a canine bodyguard for his 11-year-old fox terrier, champion cocktail of Knox. Terrier this year lost hearing and it's sight became impaired, but it still has delusions of grandeur about it's fighting ability. The bodyguard is a rough, tough pooch that finishes fights before the terrier has time to get hurt.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Extra Performance on Thursday, February 11, Will Be Presented to Swell the Red Cross Relief Fund; Warners' Earle Puts on Midnight Show This Saturday for Same Cause; "Lloyds of London" Is a Film of Epic Sweep; News Notes of Current Theater.

CONSCIOUS of the drastic emergency that exists in the flooded areas of the Midwest, Tallulah Bankhead, coming to the National Theater next week in George Kelly's play, "Reflected Glory," has expressed a desire to give a benefit performance for the victims of this devastating calamity.

BELL.

I am graciously permitted to quote correspondence that has been exchanged with regard to the matter. The following letter was addressed to Mr. Edmund Plohn, manager of the National Theater, under date of January 30.

"My dear Mr. Plohn: It is with a great deal of pleasure that I received a telephone call this morning from Speaker Bankhead. The Speaker tells me he has just received word from his daughter, Miss Tallulah Bankhead, stating that it was her desire to give as her contribution to the Red Cross Relief Fund the entire gross receipts from the performance on Monday evening, February 8, at the National Theater. This is most acceptable to the Red Cross and we will be very glad indeed to have you make the necessary arrangements. The need is very acute indeed and continues to grow each day. Sincerely yours, (Signed) CARY T. GRAYSON, Chairman.

Having anticipated the crying need for funds in this destructive emergency, plans already had been formulated by Manager Plohn of the National for a specil, benefit performance. His reply to Mr. Grayson follows:

"Dear Sir: This is to acknowledge receipt of your very gracious note handed me by special messenger a few moments since. I hasten to reply in order to correct the Speaker's impression and through him, no doubt, you own, as to the date of the benefit performance to be given by Miss Tallulah Bankhead. There is to be a special performance of the play for this purpose on Thursday afternoon, February 11. In this connection may I ask you to designate some qualified member of your organization to assist me in the details? Assuring you of the great pleasure it affords the management of the National Theater to co-operate with you in this most urgent and worthy enterprise, I beg to remain, very respectfully yours. (Signed) EDMUND PLOHN."

This, I submit, ladies and gentlemen, is a project commanding the attention of every theater goer and every humanitarian. An extra performance of "Reflected Glory," with so distinguished a star as Miss Bankhead, alone is enough to enlist wholehearted support. For so overwhelming an emergency, it becomes an event demanding unstinted co-operation on the part of the public.

If the National is not sold out on Thursday afternoon, February 11, it will be to the everlasting shame of the National Capital.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the Three X Sisters, one of radio's and the stage's best known and most popular singing trios, will appear in person on the stage of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater at the special midnight performance to be presented this Saturday, February 6, for the benefit of the flood victims. This word was received yesterday by John J. Payette, zone manager of the Warner interests in the Washington territory. In addition to the Three X Sisters, the entire new bill booked for the Earle will be presented at this special midnight show. This will incude Rachel Carley, singing star of the Manhattan Merry-Go-Round radio hour; the Mattison Rhythms, youthful dancers; Le Paul, ace card manipulator, and the Bradwins in "Funny Feats." The screen feature for the new week—Kay Francis in "Stolen Holiday"—also will be shown.

There are sweep, power and romantic charm—not to mention an undercurrent of villainy and melodrama—in "Lloyd's of London," the new Twentieth Century-Fox production, which was previewed yesterday afternoon by a quorum of the local drama desks in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange.

Here is a picturized story that takes on something the stature of George Arliss' "House of Rothschild," in which Darryl Zanuck also had a hand, dealing as it does with mighty events, famous characters in history and episodes of an epic nature. The whole thing has been encompassed with an artistry, a photographic excellence and an inspired selection of principal players that leave a deep and indelible imprint upon one's memory.

The play deals with the troubled era of the Napoleonic conquests and outlines the foundation and growth of Lloyds as a coalition of financial syndicates eventually willing to underwrite any hazard of a private or pubic nature—at a fair percentage for the firm. This aspect of the story, however, is not made its fundamental appeal. Counting houses are drab affairs, at best, even when wagers run high and risks are great, so a romantic recital has been interjected that may safely be guaranteed to hold the interest of both feminine and masculine audiences.

There is no intention at this time to offer a detailed review of the film, but it may not be going too far to point out that any celluloid drama that can boast the presence in its cast of such recognized artists, both juvenile and adult, as Freddie Bartholomew, Madeleine Carroll, Sir Guy Standing, C. Aubrey Smith, J. M. Kerrigan, Una O'Connor, Forrester Harvey, Gavin Muir, E. E. Clive, Montagu Love, Arthur Hohl, Robert Greig, Lumsden Hare, Murray Kinnell, Billy Bevan, Ivan Simpson, Holmes Herbert, Reginald Barlow, Vernon Steele, Leonard Mudie and Thomas Pogue cannot fall far short of top acting honors.

But "Lloyds of London" goes further than that. It introduces an especially competent leading man in the person of Tyrone Power, provides Freddie Bartholomew with a juvenile rival for first place among the precocious youngsters of the screen in Douglas Scott and elevates Virginia Field to the distinction of a part of prominence as a barmaid who achieves social grace.

This, distinctly, is a picture that should be seen, when it comes to town, as a sterling example of the completeness with which the cinema is able to apprehend far-flung and portentous events. It will rank among the "big ones" of the year.

Washingtonians who saw the famous "Folies des Femmes" revue, which opened the season at the French Casino in New York, will recall one of that entertainment's outstanding stars—Cilly Feindt, the only "horse conductor" in the world. Miss Feindt, with Bobby, her horse, will come to the Earle Theater stage for the week of Friday, February 12, presenting an act which is said to be different from anything ever presented here. Miss Feindt is blonde, charming and 22. Bobby's age I do not know.

Queen Mary Attends London Movie House

London, Feb. 2 (AP).—The theatrical prelude to the coronation of King George VI in May opened tonight with Queen Mother Mary on hand to give royal acclaim.

Entering a theater for the first time since the death of her husband, the late George V, the Queen occupied a specially constructed box, walled in by flowers, at the premiere of Elizabeth Bergner's new film, "Dreaming Lips."

A New Romantic Film Alliance

When "Lloyd's of London" reaches a local Loew screen at an early date, the romantic interest of the exciting narrative which the film discloses will be in the competent hands of Madeleine Carroll, beautiful English blonde, and Tyrone Power, whose heritage is a generous measure of the acting talent of his late distinguished father. These two are pictured above in one of the more tense moments of the action in which they participate with such fine effect.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

10 Best in Newsreels.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 2.

Thank goodness, we have reached the end of the yearly season during which everybody seems moved to announce a choice of the ten best something or other. Some day I shall startle Hollywood and pick the ten worst; that same day I shall move to darkest Africa to live.

But I have just ran across a most interesting such list. It is the result of a secret ballot taken by newsreel editors to select the ten best actors in the days' news. The boys simply take this poll for their own amusement; nobody gets cups or gold awards.

CLARK GABLE.

The vote for the best actor in the newsreels was unanimous. President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. All agreed that politis robbed the screen of an actor of tremendous charm and personality. Second best was voted the former King Edward VIII of England, once Prince of Wales, now Duke of Windsor.

With the two romantic figures heading the list, third and fourth drew heavy roles. Benito Mussolini of Italy and Adolf Hitler of Germany may play to more hisses than cheers in theaters, but newsreel editors asy they are excellent actors. Two air heroes rank next—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Admiral Richard E. Byrd. Newsreel men say they have "juvenile appeal." Following in order were chosen former Gov. Al Smith, George Bernard Shaw, former Mayor Jimmy Walker and wrestler Man Mountain Dean, all classified as "comedians."

I don't want to butt in on the boys' little game, but they forgot to nominate actresses for their cast. I suggest Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Wallis Simpson and five Canadian tots known as the Dionnes.

A naive young movie magazine interviewer had Clark Gable cornered on the set this morning when I dropped in for a visit on his set. I eased to a position close enough to hear their conversation, because fan magazine writers are nearly always good for a laugh. The girl asked Clark, "Which actor do you think will do best at box office in 1937?"

Clark looked around carefully, winked broadly my way and replied, "I'm not sure, but I'm pulling like helt for that guy Gable."

Jack Oakie, now with RKO after 'steen years with Paramount, was standing in front of his old studio talking with Director Wesley Ruggles, Writer Claude Binyon, Gary Cooper and Bob Burns. Jack was, as is his forte, explaining in glowing terms how much more he liked his new job and contract. At this precise moment an RKO truck, one of those giant ten-ton behemoths, rumbled by, and the drived yelled, "Harya, Jack?"

And Oakie shouted back, "Hi, Speed! Got my salary? Just wheel it up to the dressing room and tell my man to stack it in the back closet"

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Of the dozens of types of poor players, none is so exasperating a partner as the "smart-Aleck" type. Ignorance, or inexperience, is something for which the individual is not to blame, but it is quite another matter when a player "knows better" and gets fancy for the sheer love of showing off. West, in the hand shown below, had every reason and right to be thoroughly disgusted.

North, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ 7 ♡ A 6 5 3 ◇ Q 8 5 4 ♣ A Q 10 2
♠ A 10 8 6 3 2 ♡ 8 ◇ A 9 3 2 ♣ 8 6	North West East South	♠ Q J 4 ♡ K J 10 9 2 ◇ 7 6 ♣ 9 5 3
	♠ K 9 5 ♡ Q 7 4 ◇ K J 10 ♣ K J 7 4

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 N T	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Pass

West opened his fourth-highest spade, and East (who had been playing bridge long enough to know the elementary conventions) put up his Queen instead of properly playing the lower of his touching honors. Declarer won with the King and, counting that he would be unable to run nine tricks without knocking out the diamond Ace, went about that duty immediately before the defenders should have learned too much of each other's holdings. West held off the diamond King and Jack, hoping that his partner could signal him on a later round. Naturally, West thought that the declerer still had the Jack of spades, probably with a guard, and in that case it would be necessary to put East on lead so as to lead a spade to West's tenace.

East, having false-carded at the very first trick, now decided to make another brilliant false-card, and on the third lead of diamonds (West winning the Ace) signalled very loudly with the nine of clubs. As is usual in such cases, it was his partner, West, who was fooled, not the declarer. West immediately led the club eight, and declarer spread his hand, with a snicker which increased to a guffaw when he saw that the defenders could have run off five spade tricks.

House Group Approves Plan to Retire Justices

By the Associated Press.

The House Judiciary Committee approved yesterday a bill to permit United States Supreme Court justices to retire at 70 on full pay.

Under the present law, a member of the court must resign to be relieved of his duties. They usually have been given compensation by Congress.

Weather Fools Plants.

Prince Frederick, Md., Feb. 2 (AP). The spring-like weather in Calvert County provided food for State's Attorney Arthur W. Dowetl's garden. He has been eating home-grown kale and swiss chard for a week.

Throughout the county, lawns and gardens are green, flowers are in bloom and tobacco has been in condition to strip for a month.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the Philadelphia Orchestra in Constitution Hall Tuesday night; Viscount Hidemaro Konoye and Eugene Ormandy, conductors; Gregori Pyatigorski, violonsello soloist. Program: "Leonore" Overture No. 3 (Beethoven), Symphony No. 2 in D major (Beethoven), Concerto in D major for violoncello (Haydn), Suite No. 2 from "Daphnis et Chloe" (Ravel).

It was with genuine interest that last evening's auditors witnessed the local debut of Viscount Hidemaro Konoye, the Nipponese composer and conductor, a sample of whose music was presented here last season by Leopold Stokowski. Not only was curiosity active as to the manner of interpretation that an Oriental musician would apply to music of the Occident, but there was a ready friendliness toward the visitor from the far shore of the Pacific Ocean.

To pronounce conclusive judgment upon a conductor on the basis of his reading of two works would be obviously unjust. A verdict must be withheld until such time as one has had further opportunty to assay his knowledge of other composers. It may be said, however, that Viscount Konoye knows very thoroughly the third "Lenore" overture and the second symphony of Beethoven, and that his appreciation of their idiom is sensitively manifest. He has the scores in his head, and his concention of their ideational and emotional content is not in the least confused.

To the trained musician, the assimilation of foreign idioms in music is not nearly as difficult a task as the acquisition of idiomatic speech, for the elements of musical language are the same in all lands, however divergent the combinations. Henry Eichheim has accomplished remarkable results in adapting the music of the Far East to the modern orchestra, and Viscount Konoye can express himself through the same medium with facility. It is therefore no matter for surprise to find him keenly competent as an interpreter of Beethoven.

One may say that his readings were conventional in the sense that he faithfully observed the traditions of performance. He did not strive for effects, nor did he pose himself as a conductor with original ideas. The question left in one's mind is the extent of his authority over an orchestra and the range of his musicianship. He has a nervous beat to which one must become accustomed, and a disconcerting habit of giving his cues a little in advance of the attack.

Second in the unaccustomed aspects of the concert was the appearance of Gregori Pyatigorski, the Russian violoncellist, who rivals Felix Salmond in stature. Inasmuch as he has been playing the Dvorak concerto considerably this season, it was rather a disappointment to have him substitute the Hayden concerto, which is overly familiar. His performance of it, however, left nothing at which to cavil. The purity of his intonation, the suavity of his phrasing and the effortless exercise of a masterly technique were admirable. Indubitably, he belongs in the cenacle of the great violoncellists of our day.

Eugene Ormandy was mindful of the soloist in his expert conducting of the concerto, after which he brought the program to a close with a brilliant performance of the Ravel suite. "Daphnis et Chloe" is Ravel's orchestral masterpiece, so far beyond the merely clever "Bolero" as to make any comparison odious.

400-Pound Wife Asks Divorce From Midget

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred Monti Glicken, a professional fat woman who claims she weighs 400 pounds, went before Supreme Court Referee James A. O'Gorman today to ask for an annulment of her marriage to Jack Glicken, whose billing reads: "King of Midgets."

His wife told Referee O'Gorman the marriage, performed December 4, 1934, in a midtown hotel, was designed to publicize a show in which they were appearing. They never lived together, Mrs. Glicken said.

First Lady 'Go-Between' In Redecorating Mansion

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

There is to be redecorating at the White House this spring and the process is a complicated one, according to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Yesterday, at her press conference, she confided to the assembled newspaperwomen, it would be much simpler to decorate any number of houses of her own than to do one room at the White House. The East Room is to have new hangings. Those which are there now and are becoming worn, were selected by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt—gold damask, matching the gold of the piano.

The new ones are to be red, to conform with the original plan of the decorators. The First Lady termed herself only the "go-between" for presenting samples to the President. She looks over the great bundles of them, selects what she considers best and then, with the tact of a wise wife, picks the most appropriate moment for showing him those she has chosen for him to look over.

Has His Own Ideas.

"Is it necessary for the President to help select the hangings?" asked one of the women scribes, recalling that there were always national and international affairs to occupy a President's time.

"Oh, yes indeed," said the First Lady, laughing. "You see he likees to do it. He has his own ideas and he is very particular. Of course, the art commission may not agree. It is necessary for everyone to be in accord before the work can go forward."

Mrs. Roosevelt also mentioned that the gold piano in the East Room which has become worn during its years of use, will be replaced. There was considerable concern among the women of the press as to the possibility of the new piano being something other than gold—the gold one is a cherished tradition. Mrs. Roosevelt was noncommital, but indicated there certainly would be some gold on it, although samples of wood for the new case already had gone from the hands of the President to those of members of the art commission for consideration.

Goes to Smithsonian.

The old gold instrument probably will be given to the Smithsonian Institution.

Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday afternoon received at tea Miss Lillian Gish and Mr. John Gielgud who are appearing in "Hamlet" this week in the Capital; last night there was the dinner to the Chief Justice and members of the Supreme Court; this afternoon she is receiving a WPA group from Atlantic City at 4 o'clock and tomorrow evening comes the interdepartmental reception (and the President has expressed his determination not to shake hands with more than a thousand).

Friday Mrs. Roosevelt will go to New York where she will speak at a dinner at Teachers' College that night, and then go to Hyde Park for Saturday and Sunday. On Monday she will return and attend Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's morning musicale; after that she will be guest of honor at the Navy Sponsors' luncheon at the Carlton and in the afternoon will receive at two teas. Tuesday morning she will have another conference at 11 and that night there will be the Army and Navy reception—"and that closes the social season," said the First Lady with a significant chuckle like that of a school girl looking forward to vacation.

Japanese Guest.

Among the guests at the press conference yesterday was Miss Yoshiko Yamamuro, a member of the staff of Japan's oldest woman's magazine, who is in this country for a short stay.

There also was Miss Emily Bates who was on the Commission of Inquiry on Co-operative Enterprise, who told of her survey of European cooperatives; Miss Walsh, director of women's participation in the New York World's Fair for 1939; and Mrs. A. Ian Tullis, of the Students International House in Geneva, who was later a luncheon guest at the White House.

Miss Richards Speaks On Reaction to Hitler

Miss Janet Richards, at her weekly review of "History in the Making" this morning at the Sulgrave Club, will comment first upon the talk of Herr Hitler, last week before the Reichstag, and the reaction thereto of London and Paris; followed by the surprising revolt against militarism in Japan.

The pros and cons of the child labor amendment, the labor crisis and the effect of the court ruling on the sit-down strike will also be reviewed. A short book review will close the lecture which begins at 11 o'clock.

Go South for Season.

Mrs. Garfield Kass and Mrs. Gus Ring motored to Miami Beach and have taken a house for the winter. They will return to Washington, April 1.

Japan's Envoy, Wife Receive Guest Artist

The Ambassador of Japan and Mme. Saito entertained at a reception last evening at the embassy in honor of Viscount Konoye, who earlier had conducted the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra in two Beethoven numbers in the program at Constitution Hall. It was his debut as a conductor in Washington.

The Ambassador and Mme. Saito had as guests in the box at the concert Lady Marler, wife of the Canadian Minister, and Miss Willa Magee, who wore a black satin gown with straps of brilliants. Mme. Saito's gown was of cream-colored satin made on soft lines with a design of silver leaf at the neck. With this she wore a string of Japanese pearls.

During the second half of the program, Viscount Konoye occupied the box of the Ambassador and Mme. Saito.

Among those observed at Constitution Hall were the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. Alexander Troyanovsky, who was accompanied by several members of his staff. Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who wore a gown of gold cloth, had in her box the Counselor of the Swedish Legation, Mr. Folkee Wennerberg, and her house guest, Mrs. Henry Martin Alexander, of New York. The latter wore a frock of green taffeta. Miss Alice Clapp's box was occupied by Dr. Hans Kindler, who also attended the reception. Others present were Mrs. Matthew Whiteall and Miss Elsa Peterson, who occupied the box of Mrs. Edwin B. Parker.

Bowls of flowers decorated the embassy. On the piano was a silver vase filled with red roses. The vase was placed on a blue Japanese robe with rustic scenes outlined in gold.

In the hallway with its blue rugs were bowls of calla lilies. The buffet was set with champagne and delicacies, and decorated with vases of deep red and white carnations. There were forsythia and snapdragons in the large drawing room.

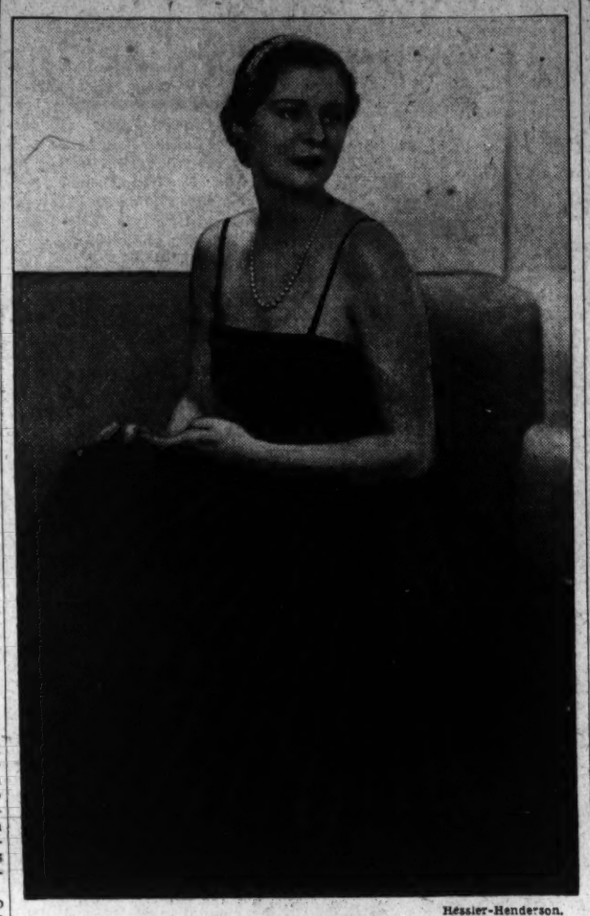
Mr. Eugene Ormandy, the conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, was present, as was the solo 'cellist, Mr. Gregor Pitigorsky. Others present included Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon., Miss Mabel Boardman, who had attended the concert; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, wearing black velvet with a white beaded top; Miss Laura Harlan, in black, with a design of gold lame, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Henderson, who at the concert were accompanied by Judge and Mrs. William Denman, of San Francisco. Mrs. Henderson wore a gown of white satin made on simple lines.

The guest of honor, Viscount Konoye, is a statesman also. He is a member of the Imperial Diet of Japan and a brother of Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Speaker of the House of Peers.

Monthly Meeting Held.

The District of Columbia alumnae of Alpha Chi Omega held the regular monthly meeting at the home of Miss Winifred Freiot, 57 Observatory Circle, last evening. Miss Freiot was assisted by Mrs. Beth Hess and Miss Lucybeth Cardon.

To Assist in Dinner Plans



Hessler-Henderson.

MRS. LAWRENCE WOOD ROBERT, Jr., whose husband, secretary of the National Democratic Committee, is chairman of the testimonial dinner to be given February 15 to Postmaster General James A. Farley. Mrs. Robert, one of the attractive young hostesses of the Capital, is assisting in arrangements for the dinner. It will be in the form of a political convention, with each table representing a different State.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Mrs. A. Ian Tullis, of the Students' International House in Geneva, who was entertained at luncheon at the White House yesterday, had been a guest there before—when Mrs. Calvin Coolidge was First Lady.

Mrs. Tullis had known Mrs. Coolidge for some years and felt something deeper than ordinary friendship for her, because it was she who had taught Mrs. Tullis' two youngster sisters how to talk. The girls, Marie and Asta Oiesen, were born deaf, and were sent to the United States from China, where their father was Danish Minister, to be educated at the Clark School in Northampton. Mrs. Coolidge, then Grace Goodhue, was their teacher. Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, who was president of the board of trustees of the school, brought the children to Washington and presented them to President Taft, to show him how they had learned to speak, and demonstrate what the school was doing.

They greeted the President in a carefully rehearsed salutation: "How do you do, Mr. President Taft," with which the President was so pleased he laughed and chuckled, to the delight of the little girls.

Mrs. Tullis attended Smith College at Northampton to be near her sisters. Later, during the Coolidge Administration, she was entertained at the White House when she came to Washington to consult Mrs. Coolidge about raising funds for the Clark School.

She and Mr. Tullis made their home in Deerfield, Mass., before going to Geneva and were friends there of the Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau. Mr. Tullis remained in Geneva during his wife's present trip here, and Mrs. Tullis expects to sail shortly on her return to Switzerland.

• • • •

Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d returned recently from her summer place in South Carolina, 25 miles south of Asheville. The absence of winter temperature in Washington has not confused her as to the seasons, she assures her friends. She has been supervising some needed repairs in preparation for the summer.

Next week she will have her cousin, Mrs. Francis I. du Pont, of Wilmington, as her guest and will entertain at a tea for her on Tuesday, which will be the first of a series of small affairs she plans to give.

• • • •

Billie, the son of Mrs. Donner Roosevelt, who has been visiting his grandparents at the White House, has a real, live Scamper—a bunny which was secured for him through the kindly offices of Mr. Raymond Muir, chief usher. With apologies for the pun, Scamper has been ushered into the White House. Whether or not he will accompany Billie home when he departs for Philadelphia will depend, according to Mrs. Roosevelt, on whether or not Billie's nurse can take care of both Scamper and Scamper's young master during the trip. Should he be left behind, no doubt the White House bunny will return to the company of ordinary rabbits, with only a Cinderella tale of his wonderful sojourn at the Executive Mansion to tell his grandchildren.

Members of High Court Honored by Roosevelts

Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes Are Ranking Guests; Dinner Is One of Three Final Social Functions of White House Season.

The dinner, one of the three final social functions of the White House season, was followed by a musicale for which additional guests were invited. Red roses, white snapdragons, buddleia and maidenhair fern decorated the table in the state dining room where the dinner was served. Ferns, palms and a variety of other flowers harmonizing with the furnishings were used in the red room, the blue room, the green room and in the east room, with its gold hangings and ivory walls, where the company gathered for the musicale.

The ranking guests were, of course, the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was also there as were Mr. Justice Van Devanter and Mrs. Sanford L. Rariden, Mr. Justice McReynolds, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Sutherland, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Butler, Mr. Justice and Mrs. Roberts and Mr. Justice Cardozo, of the Supreme Court.

Other guests included the Attorney General and Mrs. Cummings, Senator and Mrs. William E. Borah, Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, Senator and Mrs. Pat Harrison, Senator and Mrs. Robert J. Bulkley, Mr. Roswell Magill, Representative Hatton W. Sumners, Representative and Mrs. U. S. Guyer, Representative and Mrs. Malcolm Tarver, Representative Jere Cooper.

Also present at the dinner were the Solicitor General and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Hon. and Mrs. M. L. Wilson, Hon. and Mrs. Ronald Ransom, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold G. Bowen, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Archibald H. Sunderland, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Broderick, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred S. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Earle Baillie, Mr. and Mrs. David R. Coker, Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Durno.

Others were Mr. George Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Jones, Judge and Mrs. Irving Lehman, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Miller, Judge M. A. Musmanno, Mr. and Mrs. Stuart A. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Warren D. Robbins, Judge and Mrs. Samuel I. Roseman, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Storm, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Weinberg, Mr. and Mrs. S. Clay Williams, Mrs. Robert Baker, Miss Nancy Cook, Miss Adel Enright and Miss Marguerite LeHand.

The artists of the evening were Miss Susanne Fisher, soprano, and Miss Ruth Breton, violinist. Miss Fisher sang two groups of songs, "Der Gaertner," "In dem Schatten meiner Locken" and "In der Freuhe," all by Hugo Wolf, and "Niemand hat's gesehen," by Carl Loewe as her first numbers and "The Unforeseen," by Cyril Scott; "Little Roads," Nora Lee; Bergerette, a folk tune, and the Jewel Song from "Faust," as her closing group.

Miss Breton, who opened the program, played for her first group, "Liebesfreud," by Kreisler; "Berceuse," by Juon and "Perpetuum mobile," by Novacek, and, as her second, "La Gitana," by Kreisler; Nocturne, by Lili Boulanger and and Scherzo-Tarantelle by Wieniawski.

The accompanists were Mr. Harrison Potter and Miss Betty Baker.

Tomorrow night the President and Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at the interdepartmental reception and next Teusday at the Army and Navy reception, which closes the social season.

Mrs. Lynch Wed at Home Of Governor

A wedding of interest in the Capital took place yesterday at the Governor's mansion in Harrisburg, Pa., where Mrs. Mary Browder Lynch, of Washington, became the bride of Mr. Thomas Wickersham, of Harrisburg. The bride is a sister of Mrs. George H. Earle, wife of the Governor of Pennsylvania, and had Mrs. Earle as her only attendant.

The ceremony was at noon in the alcove of the state drawing room of the executive mansion. Ferns and calla lilies were banked as a background and at either end of the alcove white tapers burned in tall silver candelabra. Easter lilies, white snapdragons, narcissi and other spring flowers were used elsewhere.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Dr. J. Bailey Browder, of Washington. She wore a gray flat crepe gown with ruching at the neck and around the hem, a small gray hat with a large gray veil, and a corsage of hybrid cypredium orchids. Mrs. Earle wore beige crepe costume with accordion pleated skirt and cape, and a corsage of orchids like those worn by the bride. The bride's mother was in black with a cream lace blouse, and wore lavender orchids.

On Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Howe, entertained for the bridal couple and out-of-town guests at a supper party at their home, Old Mill House, near Harrisburg.

After the reception which followed the marriage ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Wickersham left for a trip to New Orleans by boat. They will spend three weeks there and remain in New York for a week on their return. They expect to live in Harrisburg at 7 South Front street.

Among the wedding guests were Mrs. M. Tyler McCormack and Miss Mary Tyler McCormack, Mr. and Mrs. Barton Embry and Miss Virginia Leland, of Washington; Mr. William N. Wilbur, of Warrenton; Mrs. Frank Cronkrite and Mrs. C. U. McElroy, of Bolling Green, Ky.; Mrs. Alvin Untermyer, of New York, and Baroness Louisa Bronemissa, of Austria.

Dr. and Mrs. Browder are remaining in Harrisburg until the end of the week.

By Dudley Harmon.

If there had been any gold braid in evidence at the reception given yesterday by the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, absent-minded guests might have thought they were at the annual diplomatic party at the White House. Members of the foreign corps and officials of the State Department comprised the majority of those invited to yesterday's reception. Several members of the Marine Band played on a balcony, reminiscent of the Executive Mansion.

Ambassadors, ministers, attaches and counselors were everywhere. Most of the women present seemed to be wearing black, including Mrs. Hull, who received with the Secretary. The latter chose to dispense with the inevitable announcer, who sings out the guests' names at so many Washington parties, but nearby were several State Department officials ready to direct guests into the Patio room of the Carlton, where the party was held.

On a long table in the dining room, tea and coffee were being served during the afternoon by Mrs. John Nance Garner, Mrs. William Bankhead, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Sumner Welles, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Miss Moore, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson.

One of the most striking ensembles yesterday afternoon was the handsome silver fox cape worn by Mrs. Edward Reed, whose husband is chief of the Division of Mexican Affairs in the State Department. The cape reached almost to her knees, and with it Mrs. Reed wore a tiny black pill box hat trimmed with a green moire band.

Among the first arrivals was the Minister of Egypt, Mr. Mohamed Amine Youssef, and soon after came the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis. Then the guests kept coming until all told some 600 had arrived

Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, was there and also from the British Embassy were the Counselor and Mrs. Victor Mallet, recently returned from the South, and the Commercial Secretary and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood—she wore black with touches of sapphire blue.

Other diplomats present were the Italian Ambassador and Signora de Suvich—her long black coat was trimmed at neck and hem with black fox; the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi; Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, who has been recalled to serve as Foreign Minister in the new cabinet; the Polish Ambassador and Countess Potocka; Mlle. Nora de With, daughter of the Netherlands Minister; the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, and the Cuban Ambassador, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson, who arrived with his two daughters, Senorita Olga Patterson, in black, and Mme. Ernest Schlatter, in blue.

Mme. Peter, wife of the Swiss Minister, was one of the few women not wearing black. Her gray wool frock was made with two bows at the neck and with this she wore a small gray hat.

Mr. Justice and Mrs. Owen Roberts were early arrivals, Mrs. Roberts wearing with her costume double silver foxes. Mrs. Sol Bloom chatted with Mrs. William E. Borah, who wore a long wool cape with a trimming of Persian lamb. The Speaker of the House accompanied Mrs. Bankhead. Both are looking forward to the arrival—possibly on Sunday—of their famous actress daughter, Tallulah.

Neat Coiffure Should Match Beauty Type

Sophisticate or Clinging Vine—Make-up Must Conform.

New York Stylist Classes Women According to Personality.

SOPHISTICATE or clinging vine—decide to which of these two types of femininity you in general belong and plan your coiffure and make-up accordingly.

Such is the advice of D. Dumas, of New York, stylist in feminine beauty who is in Washington as a guest speaker at the convention of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association at the Willard Hotel.

Mr. Dumas, who studied sculpture and painting with European masters in order to understand better the art of enhancing the charms of the feminine face, sees all women as divided into two general types—the modern and independent and the gentle and naive. Coiffures and make-up should emphasize these qualities, in their wearers, he maintains.

For the Sophisticate.

"The sophisticated type of face which usually expresses intelligence, culture and experience, rather than beauty, has sharp features and definite lines, which should be accentuated, he said. "In the coiffure, as much of the face as possible should be exposed, and waves or rolls of the hair should have a sharp, downward trend, rather than an upward and softer line. Make-up should employ the same theme; pale powder, no rouge, dark lipstick, silver-gray eye shadow, elongated eyebrows."

For the feminine type of face, the procedure for coiffures and make-up are reversed, according to the Dumas psychology. A woman of this classification should wear her hair in soft arrangements about her face, with the line definitely upward. Since her type is synonymous with fragile-like beauty, make-up should aim to perfect this loveliness. Unlike the sophisticated type whose goal should be smartness, the feminine type suggests prettiness. Powder to emphasize such charm should have a rosy glow, of the darker color range, but not yellowish; rouge should be used by women in this category, to promote a fresh and healthy appearance; silver-green eye-shadow and natural-looking eyebrows complete the make-up.

Subtle Make-Up.

"Make-up," commented Mr. Dumas, "should be mysterious and subtle, not flamboyant. That is why, I believe, eye-shadow and mascara should never be a definite color. A shadow is not a tangible thing, neither should the eye-shadow be accessible to diagnosis—the most effective kind is that which is an elusive combination of pastels, whose color cannot be defined. Mascara, to be effective, should be a combination of at least two colors; both eye-shadow and mascara should contrast with, rather than repeat, the color of the lashes and eyes. This method frames the eyes, makes them appear larger and more luminous."

There is romance as well as mystery in make-up that is artistically applied, Mr. Dumas contends, also much psychology. This noted authority has a background which explains his attitude toward the more unusual manner of creating complexions and coiffures to achieve distinctive beauty. A period as beautician to the imperial court of Russia, a number of years supervising the make-up and coiffures at the Opera in Paris, and several years in one of the leading studios in Hollywood in the same capacity, enables him to transform an entire personality and attitude, by drastic changes in cosmetic ensembles and hair styling.

Gowns Influence Coiffures.

"When wearing costumes of shiny materials, echo this glistening quality in the make-up, and when donning clothes of dull-surfaced fabrics, wear dull or a mat-like complexion, with lots of powder," Mr. Dumas advised. "Broad shoulders require a coiffure that extends out from the face; open-backed evening gowns need a longer back hairline for balanced proportions and to prolong the straight-line theme. In other words, the entire picture should be properly balanced if beauty or smartness is to be achieved."

If your nose is too long, the correct way to detract from this unsainly feature is to wear flowers in the hair—thus calling attention to the hair-decoration rather than the nose, is Mr. Dumas' advice. Another bit of information in this realm—exaggerate sharp features rather than trying to soften them. "Freedom of expression is the guidepost to smart or beautiful individuality," he said. "Don't try to look like everybody else, be outstandingly original—don't be a copyist."

Beauty or Chic? Let Coiffure Decide

For the face definitely sophisticated (right) accent the sharp lines by straight lines in the coiffure; waves and curls or rolls should have a downward trend. For the feminine type of face (below) the softly waved coiffure with upward movement is effective. Both coiffures designed by D. Dumas, hair and complexion stylist.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Girl Second Fiance's Decision to Change Career When It Means Long Marriage Postponement.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young woman in my early twenties, living at home with my parents at present. I have finished two years' college work and my father sees no necessity of my getting a job when he can provide for me so liberally. I am socially active and hold office in several clubs of different sorts. My fiance is 24, has had special business training and at present holds a political job which pays a fairly good salary. He has some prospect of advancement and has a substantial bank account which he had been saving against our marriage which was scheduled for next summer.

• • • •

Although he has had several advancements in salary and responsibility, he has finally decided he doesn't like politics; that he wishes to realize a long-cherished ambition to study medicine. If he does, this will mean that he must spend his savings on schooling and that our marriage will have to be indefinitely postponed. It will mean that the prime years of his youth will be spent at school and that he will be in his thirties by the time he is ready to start practicing.

• • • •

Would you advise him to study medicine or to continue in his present work? My parents hesitate to give an opinion, as they consider the problem too big for them to attempt to decide. There are reasons why it is impossible for him to attend night school. He would have to enroll in a regular course. I am willing to wait for him and might take up nurses' training as my past courses in nursing, nutrition and chemistry would fit nicely into such a program. Your counsel in this matter will be much appreciated. Sincerely, DAILY READER.

• • • •

Things to Consider.

DEAR DAILY READER: Since your fiance has the means and the long-cherished ambition to study medicine, it seems to me he would be demonstrating courage and common sense in putting aside a distasteful, even though remunerative, occupation in order to follow his natural bent. If you wish to keep close to him in spirit and interests, second his choice; don't attempt to dissuade him from it.

• • • •

However, if marriage is indefinitely postponed; is made to wait upon his sheepskin and the hanging out of his shingle as a full-fledged physician or specialist, it is not unlikely you may never marry each other. This possibility should be faced and wisely dealt with now. The better way, if it can be arranged, might be for you to marry next summer as planned, so that he can take up his studies with you at his side. The next four to six years will be crucial, in the sense that during those years you two must either grow together or inevitably drift apart. Much as both of you might like to, it will be very difficult to preserve—at long range and in the face of divergent interests and activities—a mutually tender, understanding and vital devotion.

• • • •

Perhaps you might find a job, and with some financial help from your parents—providing they are willing to co-operate to that extent in safeguarding your happiness; and providing your fiance will give his ungrudging consent to such an arrangement—marry and make a home for your husband near the campus where he plans to study. If this cannot be arranged, the second best thing to do, as you have already suggested, is to enroll for a course of study at the same university. Such a procedure would go a long way toward preserving your mutuality of interests and sympathetic understanding of each other's day-by-day problems. M. H.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

NOT MANY of us in this day and age are puzzled by the problem of fixing bedrooms for leisurely hours. In our household, at least, the morning is such a busy time of the day that we can't skip out of bed and into a dress and out of our room fast enough.

But Fan Carver got all banged up in an accident last summer and has had to live like a duchess ever since while she recuperates. Doing nothing is the hardest thing she ever did, especially when its meant staying away from college this fall. Her mother has tried to make things as amusing as possible for Fan, having quiet little parties of Fan's girl friends and getting her pretty negligees and slippers.

Now she's just bought Fan a chaise longue for her bedroom—quite a spiffy one with apple green brocade covering and feather cushions. But now the room isn't up to the elegance of the chaise and Fan's mother has decided to do the room over since Fan is going to have to take things easy all winter.

The rug is quite a good one—a brocaded pattern in two tones of cream, so they will keep that. But the walls will be done over in a flowered paper that has a peach ground, and the curtains will have a creamy point d'espirit made very full and frilled with draperies of apple green taffeta made with ruffles, too. For a bedspread, they're having cream lace over peach—the dressing table will have a skirt of apple green taffeta and the two easy chairs will be covered in flowered chintz with green welting.

Gain Self-Confidence

She's always had more beaux, better jobs, greater enjoyment in everything she does.

Grace is no better looking or more clever than Marta. It's just that her bubbling self-confidence gives her the radiant enthusiasm, the vivacious charm that brings the best things in life to her.

Now Grace is engaged to Larry High, the good-looking young manager of the plant where both girls work. From the very first he was attracted by her sparkling self-confidence. Her enthusiasm fires him with new spirit, makes him sure he can conquer the world.

Grace built her self-confidence by taking stock of all her assets. She didn't say, "What chance have I to attract Larry? The girls in his set, with their money, smart clothes, and leisure, have the advantage over me."

Instead she said, "I have vitality, a cheerful disposition, a sense of humor, good looks. I'm alert, a clear thinker because I've had to make my own way." So she convinced herself she was well fitted to be Larry's wife.

Marta didn't even bother to smile pleasantly at Larry. "He's too important to pay any attention to a nobody like me," she said.

Of all the qualities necessary for success, self-confidence is the easiest to build up. Our 40-page booklet, "Getting More Out of Life," tells you how. It also teaches you to develop emotions, other personal assets which open opportunity to you.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Getting More Out of Life," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Complete Ban On Jazz Songs Called Unfair

Parents Should Take More Interest in Music of Their Children.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

PARENTS are apt to express disapproval of modern popular music. They complain it is vulgar, tuneless, and not to be compared with the popular music of their youth.

Probably the same objections have been made since the time of the cave men, and yet the folk songs of the past are today a highly respected and valued part of our musical heritage. Music was originally religious. Even the music sung at the harvest festivals and other important seasons of the year, the mother's cradle song, the songs of occupations, had in early times some religious meaning.

The songs of today are more plain spoken than the songs of yesterday, but so are our speech and manners. They merely reflect the mores of the times. As to their vulgarity—are they really more vulgar than the early rags and the heart songs of 30 years ago? Even then the pulpit was anathematizing the "rag-time generation." Forty years before then "Champagne Charlie," which took the country by storm, was not considered fit for a young girl to sing, by the mid-Victorian parent.

Children and popular music have always shocked the older generation. The music of a generation is very apt to express the attitude of the people who enjoy it. If parents took more interest in the songs which their children sing, they might learn a lot about the youngsters.

There is much to be said for the jazz of today. It is rhythmic, and in its own obscure way, tuneful. A steady diet of it is somewhat exhausting, but to ban it completely is unfair to the children and is narrow-minded. It may prove a point of contact with them.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

House Dust and Asthma.

Certainly, the relation of house dust to asthmatic symptoms was not recognized until a few years ago. What are some of the offending substances? Among the most common are silk and wool from draperies, hangings, cushions, clothing, etc., various cleaning powders used about the house, and feathers and dandruff, either of human or animal origin. In addition there may be unknown factors which cannot be identified, but which nevertheless may be responsible for difficult breathing or some intractable types of eczema—all of allergic origin.

Struggled to Breathe.

A woman entered the hospital for a thorough checking in relation to asthema. At the time of her admission she was struggling for breath and the only relief obtained was through hypodermic injections of adrenalin. Skin tests were begun promptly and on the third day the victim was entirely free from symptoms, despite the fact that nothing in a curative way had been attempted. There was no return of the paroxysms while she remained in the institution.

On going carefully into the patient's history it was discovered that she had been well a year previously, when she spent a few weeks visiting friends—a considerable distance from home. Evidence pointed so conclusively to the fact that there was something about her living quarters that served to pull the trigger and thus inaugurate the attacks that a careful cleaning of every room, including the basement, was undertaken. Dust samples were secured from every nook and cranny. In addition, specimens were obtained from the vacuum cleaner, and more than half these collections gave a violent reaction when applied to the patient's skin.

However, no relief resulted when she was isolated from all the dust particles which could be identified. All the substances mentioned above were removed, including orris root face powder. A pet dog was boarded out temporarily. But promptly upon the patient's return to her residence symptoms reappeared. Arrangements were made to have her live in a neighborhood hotel for a few weeks to give a practical test to the house dust theory. Again she was entirely symptom free.

The question then presented itself, what could be done to permit this woman to live in comfort in her own domicile? It was finally decided to make an extract of the pooled house dust in the hope that the injection of this material would render her nonsensitive. The treatment lasted little more than a month, the sufferer residing meanwhile in a hotel. She was then allowed to visit her apartment for a few hours each day, the period being lengthened gradually until at the end of a week she gave up her hotel room. This case has been followed for three years, and to date there has been no return of symptoms.

Fight Against Dust.

Within the last few years much attention has been given to the importance of a dust free room in households where one member has asthma, the remedy for which does not be immediately at hand. Most sufferers are comfortable within a few hours after entering such a space. Of course, ventilation must be provided, and for this purpose air filters are placed in the windows. It is not assumed that the room harbors no dust, but the reduction in the number of particles in the air is so great that the result appears to be almost miraculous.

House dust asthma sometimes increases during the winter season. This is because most of us spend longer hours within doors and those who are susceptible absorb larger quantities of the irritating elements. If there is an asthmatic in the family, routine cleaning of floors, carpets, woodwork, walls, etc., may not be sufficient and more thorough and complete methods of dust removals may be necessary.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Feb. 2.

IT MAY be sad, but it is equally true, that no subject agitates the local yokelry as much, at present, as that of the public and private consumption of vinous and spirituous liquids by members of our high-strung sex. The press, the pulpit and even the cafes are filled with chatter about it.

ALICE HUGHES.

Husbands stand up in open court and accuse their wives of being habitual souses—but one of these got his come-uppance the other day here from Supreme Court Justice Schmuck. The judge ruled that no evidence had been brought in that Mrs. Howard McCandlish was a regular drinker, as charged by her doctor husband, and that a slight letting down of the bars on a New Year's Eve did not prove a lady morally blighted. The good jurist then tossed the husband's separation suit out the courtroom window.

The town was just cooling down from this high moment when Charles G. Bond, head of our alcohol board, got up on his hind legs before the local Kiwanis Club boys and said that a woman drinking at a bar is not a pretty sight. Ignoring Brother Bond's sense of the word, the newspapers and night clubs whirled around in a frenzy, and sent photographers out to snap all the lovely girls they could find at bars. The fact that most of the pretty babes so pictured happened (merely happened) to be working in the floor show at the cafes so publicized could not obscure the fact that they did look fetching enough, even while clutching a glass filled with the Old Enemy.

It may be all right to jest airily about this, but it is really a very serious question, especially in this demoralized crossroads. No one, up to now, knows the answer. Alas, I doubt that there is one!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Douglas Fairbanks, jr., comes dashing into the village in true Fairbanks style, starting loud reports that before he goes to Hollywood he will resume (or revive) his courtship of Miss Gertie Lawrence, co-staring so nicely with dear Null Coward in the one-act plays. Cool heads opine that the romance is cold—but who kens, or cares? . . .

• • • •

I mentioned here, not long ago, the plague of pictures of happy girls and ladies in Florida which cover the local press at this time of year. It's now raging its hottest. Checking my dailies, I find that no less than four of them used the very same snap of pretty Jane Ewing Rovensky, of here, wearing short shorts and a sweet smile. That day it was unavoidable, though I don't blame the dazzled editors much. Mrs. Harrison Williams, of course, clicks oftener, even though she wears slacks, but after all, she's Mona the Well-Dressed Gal . . .

• • • •

Wini Shaw, the dark-haired beauty, is back in town from Hollywood singing at our Versailles Night Club, and still giving out that "Lady in Red" song which first brought her movie attention. On the theory, as usual, that if it was good then, it's good now . . .

• • • •

I haven't got around to reading Elinor Glyn's memoirs—saving that for a real cold spell. Local book reviewers said it was pretty interesting, though nothing to set fire to the bookcase. Doesn't seem possible that 30 years ago "Three Weeks," with its lady on the tiger-skin, was a moral horror. I shouldn't be surprised if it were a grammar shool textbook nowadays . . .

Shirtwaist Frocks For Cocktail Hour Favored in Paris

Paris (U.P.).—Lame cocktail and dinner dresses, made in the shirtwaist style, have been taken up by smart Parisiennes. These gowns, forerunners of the coming shorter skirt era, have hems that are 13 inches from the floor.

The lame materials come in particularly beautiful shades this year, and many of them are not only uncrushable but are guaranteed not to tarnish. Coppery red, bright as well as dull, and greenish gold are popular. Silver is smart, and a new gunmetal or dark steel lame is used a great deal also.

The most popular style of cocktail dress is the shirtwaist pattern, which has a high neckline, topped with a small, tailored turn-over collar. The long front opening fastens with big buttons of bright gold or silver and the short skirt is usually made with a kick pleat.

'Heavies' Again Popular.

Paris, (AP).—Perhaps everyone believed the day of long-sleeved, long-legged flannel underwear was past, but lots of it is being sold in Paris today for winter sports. A combination of silk and wool, lighter in weight than flannel, is the most popular choice, with a tight ribbed band to protect the neckline, the wrists and the ankles.

Canape Lorenzo Recipe Wins Weekly Prize in Post Contest

By Rebekah Blake.

CANAPES, those luscious little snacks of food, may be even more interesting than they sound because of the number of methods of preparation.

Selecting the winners of the receipe contest for last week was an especially difficult job, for most of the suggestions were appetizers of more than passing note.

The first prize, $3, was awarded Miss Virginia Veney, of 5334 Gay street northwest, for her recipe for Canape Lorenzo.

Mrs. James Strayer, of Bethesda, Md., won the second prize of $2 for her recipe for cucumber and caviar canapes. The third prize, $1, went to Mrs. E. A. Condon, of Bethesda, for her tomato and anchovy canape recipe. The fourth prize, also $1, went to Mrs. Eugene Smith, of 2909 O street northwest, for her recipe for assorted canapes. Mrs. Joseph W. Ireland, of 719 Third street northeast, won the fifth prize, $1, with her recipe for smoked sturgeon canapes.

Here is Miss Veney's recipe:

Canape Lorenzo.

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 slice of onion
1 cup of stock
1 cup crabmeat, chicken or lobster
1 tablespoon milk
2½ tablespoons grated American cheese
2½ tablespoons Swiss cheese
Salt, pepper and cayenne

Fry onion chopped fine in one tablespoon butter; add one tablespoon flour and cook but do not let brown. Add the stock slowly and when smooth add the cooked crabmeat. Season highly with salt, pepper and cayenne. Let simmer for 6 or 8 hours.

In another pan put 1 tablespoon butter and when melted add 1 tablespoon of flour but do not brown; then add milk and cheese; cook long enough to soften the cheese. Remove from fire, cool and form the cheese mixture into six balls. Have ready six slices buttered toast or fry the bread in butter. Cover them with a layer of the crab mixture and place in the center one of the balls of cheese. Put in hot oven for five minutes.

Mrs. Strayer's recipe:

Cucumber and Caviar Canape.

Cut bread in star-shaped pieces and toast on both sides. Spread with creamed butter.

Cut cucumber ¾-inch slices, hollow out center. Place cucumber cup on toast and fill with caviar seasoned with lemon juice. Garnish with tiny Dutch onions.

Mrs. Condon's recipe follows:

Tomato and Anchovy Canapes.

12 thin slices firm ripe tomato, 2 inches in diameter
12 rounds of sliced bread, same size and shape as tomatoes
3 dozen anchovy fillets
1 hard cooked egg
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon curry powder

Saute the rounds of bread in olive oil. Spread each lightly with butter creamed with curry and a pinch of salt.

Lay on a totato slice, then 3 fillets of anchovy. Sprinkle with crumbled egg yolk and finely chopped egg white, and, lastly, a little parsley.

Here is Mrs. Smith's recipe:

Assorted Canapes.

Make your canapes from a cheese pastry, using one-third of a cupful of shortening to every cupful of flour. Roll to quarter inch thickness and sprinkle with grated cheese. Fold and roll out again, sprinkle with cheese, using one-third of a cupful of cheese to every cup of flour. Chill. Roll pastry very thin and cut in fancy shapes preferably the smallest cooky cutters; hearts, diamonds and many more. Bake them at 425 degrees F. to 450 degrees F. for 8 or 10 minutes until brown and flaky. In the center of rounds (1½ inch in diameter), place some potted ham circled with pearl onions. Spread the diamonds with cheese mixed with Worcestershire and shredded water cress with a rosette of mayonnaise on each point. Spread clubs with caviar, adding a tiny border of hard-boiled egg rubbed through a strainer. In the center of hearts place a curled anchovy and add a tiny border of mayonnaise forced through a pastry tube. Mix roquefort cheese with chopped celery, chopped onions and Worcestershire sauce, season and spread on any of the shapes.

Mrs. Ireland's receipe:

Smoked Sturgeon Canape.

Cut stale white bread in one-third inch slices, trim off crust and cut slices in crescents or triangles. Then saute a golden brown in butter.

Spread with anchovy paste or with French mustard, then arrange flaked, smoked sturgeon over canapes. Sprinkle thickly with finely chopped olives and pimentos. Garnish each with a rolled fillet of anchovy. Dispose each canape on a bread and butter plate covered with a paper doily and garnish with sprays of parsley.

STIR PICKLE SPICE INTO VINEGAR, AND POUR INTO CROCK. PLACE MEAT IN THIS MARINADE AND LET STAND FROM 3 TO 5 DAYS TURN EVERY DAY.

Add to rice 2 hard-cooked eggs, 2 tablespoons pimiento chopped fine, 2 tablespoons green pepper chopped fine, 1 tablespoon parsley chopped fine, 1 tablespoon scraped onion, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt. Press through potato ricer. Arrange on platter with sardines and lettuce, sprinkle with olives, chopped, and serve with French dressing.

Cracked ice, in an ice bag or wrapped in a cloth, will often cure a headache when applied to the head, neck or soles of the feet. Use manufactured ice, because it is frozen solidly and will last much longer than other ice.

Broiled Steak Real Delicacy With Dressing

Meat Cooked by French Recipe Is Especially Palate-tingling.

HAVE FRENCH BROILED STEAK for your hungry husband's dinner tonight or serve it when his boss comes to a meal. Few dishes have won such popular acclaim as the broiled steak and when it is prepared with French dressing it is especially palatable.

This steak is wholesome sustenance and has much visual appeal. It is especially hailed by the modern homemaker for its quick cooking when the club meetings adjourn after 5 o'clock.

Here is the recipe for a broiled French dressed steak: Trim and wipe the steak and marinate it in ½ cup of well-seasoned French dressing for ½ hour. Arrange the steak on the rack of the broiler pan and put in the broiling oven. Broil, turning once until the desired degree of doneness is reached. A 1½ to 2 inch steak cooked rare should take 15 minutes, a 3-pound steak done medium, requires 18 to 20 minutes and a well-done steak should cook about 30 minutes. Brown the steak quickly on each side so it will hold in its original juices.

Glazed Onions.

Boil 1½ cups small onions until tender, drain, dry and put in small saucepan with 1½ tablespoons butter and 1 tablespoon sugar. Cook until slightly brown, shaking occasionally to keep from sticking and cooking slowly so that they will neither burn nor lose their shape.

Baked Eggplant in Pimiento Cases.

Cut ½ eggplant in slices, remove skin and cook in boiling water with 1 teaspoon salt until soft. Drain thoroughly, mash and add 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup soft stale bread crumbs, 1 egg, beaten, ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper and a few drops onion juice. Line 4 small molds or muffin tins with pimientos, fill with mixture, cover with buttered crumbs and bake 15 minutes at 350 F. Remove from molds to platter and put a sprig of parsley in the top of each.

Apricot Ice Cream Pies.

Put canned apricots in baked tartlet shells and cover with vanilla ice cream, then cover completely with meringue made by beating 3 egg whites until stiff adding gradually 3 tablespoons sugar and ¾ teaspoon vanilla. Put in a 450 F. oven for 1 minute to brown meringue delicately, remove from the oven and serve at once.

Baked Tartlet Shells.

Roll out pastry, cut out with cover of coffee can and press on the outside of patty pans or muffin pans. Prick and bake in a 450 F. oven. Remove from tins and use as desired.

Soaking Aids 'Pop' in Corn; Agitate Early

When the wind howls around the corner of the house or rain beats down on the window pane, there is no place like home and nothing more delicious than a generous bowl of crisp, buttery popcorn.

You've probably heard time and again the virtues of this popular confection, but perhaps no one has ever told you what to do when the corn won't pop, wheher to use butter or lard in it, how to prevent burning and why some folks get twice as many "pops" out of the same kernels that you use.

If the corn has become too dry to pop well, place 2 pounds in a 2-quart fruit jar and add two to five tablespoons of water. If it pops fairly well, two will be enough. Screw on the cover and shake. Allow it to stand for two days. This treatment should restore the corn to good popping condition.

For one-half cup of unpopped kernels, the best amount of fat or oil to secure the greatest expansion of the grain is six level standard tablespoons. This may seem too much, but in reality it just covers the bottom of the average size corn popper. Vegetable oil and lard give a little better volume than butter. Butter alone gives the lowest volume and burns more easily. A combination of butter and lard (equal parts) gives the desired expansion and also the rich butter flavor. The lard should be fresh.

A closed and covered utensil, as a skillet or a heavy saucepan, is best for popping.

Start agitating the corn just as soon as it begins to pop. When the last few kernels are popping, remove from fire, but continue to stir the corn until it is removed from the popper.

To add more tenderness to the corn, place it, freshly popped, in a heated utensil and allow it to stand in a warm oven or over a pilot light for 20 or 30 minutes.

William Tell	Texas Guinan
Alexander the Great	Rudolph Valentino
James J. Corbett	Edwin Booth

The correct solution is RUDOLPH VALENTINO. And this is how the puzzle is solved:

Notice the word "RUE." Also, the DOLL. Also the snarling sound of "FFFFF" from the dog. Put them all together and you have RUE-DOLL-FFF, which when pronounced sounds like RUDOLPH.

The man is handing the lady a VALENTINE. She is saying "OH." Add them together and you have VALENTINE-OH or VALENTINO.

Through the clues in this puzzle you form the name of RUDOLPH VALENTINO, the only perfectly correct solution to the puzzle.

Contracts Director.

Louis Metcalfe Walling, former director of labor for Rhode Island, will be sworn in today as head of the public contracts division enforcing the Walsh-Healey act.

Only 29, Walling was the youngest State labor commissioner in the country, but his youth didn't seem to prove a handicap. When Walling took over, Rhode Island was considered one of the more "backward" States as far as labor legislation is concerned, but, largely under his influence the Legislature passed a 48-hour law for women, a minim m wage act, a 16-year minimum age for child labor, homework laws, unemployment compensation, old-age assistance and a modification of the workmen's compensation act.

Walling studied at the Sorbonne, in Rhode Island, is a now-and-forever Republican—the Wallings are related to former Senator Metcalfe's family, which accounts for Louis' middle name. But Louis gave Rhode Island quite a shock in 1932 by campaigning for Theodore Green, Democratic candidate for Governor. One explanation of young Walling's switch in political creed was that while at Harvard Law School he roomed with Senator Burton Wheeler's son, John.

Walling studied at the Sobonne, Paris, and Geneva for a year. A great reader, he particularly enjoys reading French books in the original. He also speaks Italian fluently, likes to listen to good music and is a theater enthusiast. He did a bit of acting while at Brown University and Harvard Law and also directed several community theater plays in Rhode Island. He is a good public speaker.

Maybe it's because Diarying has twisted our perspective so we see virtually everything in a whimsical light, but we can't help chuckling over the AAA's latest surplus removal program—it's for grapefruit juice!

Overtime.

One result of the overtime report submitted to Congress will be a renewal of the fight to include a provision in the annual leave law making it possible for agencies to compensate employes working overtime with additional leave.

The original leave law drafted by Representative Robert Ramspeck would have permitted such compensatory leave, but Senator McKellar balked at the idea. Finally a compromise was worked out authorizing the Civil Service Commission to make an overtime study. The commission's findings provide a logical opening for taking up the fight again.

Agencies such as the SEC, Ramspeck has pointed out, have definite deadlines that require overtime work periodically, but compensatory leave could be granted in slack periods if the law permitted. But changes in the leave law would not solve the problem entirely. One frequently reported overtime abuse has been the practice of supervisory officers to start dictation late in the afternoons, forcing stenographers and typists to stay late. The report's showing that the largest share of overtime was done by office workers indicates considerable foundation for these complaints. Correction of this abuse would seem to rest mainly with the individual agencies.

There were three departments whose uncompensated overtime ran above the million-hour mark—Treasury, with 1,037,308 hours; Agriculture, with 2,391,905, and Veterans, with 2,658,044. That, of course, does not mean these agencies are the worst offenders, as the size of their personnel must be considered. HOLC ranked high, with more than 250,000 hours; Internal Revenue, with about 500,000, and Resettlement with about 700,000. Labor had only 500,000 extra hours, but 362,000 of that was borne by the Employment Service. The Fine Arts Commission had only one employe working overtime, H. P. Caemmerer, the commission secretary.

It's almost a month since Representative Sirovich introduced that resolution calling for an investigation of Social Security Board hiring. Sirovich promised to produce a stock of factual information supporting his charges to the House Civil Service Committee but so far nothing's been filed.

WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1937

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

I suppose we're the most freedom loving set of people in the world. We just can't stand to be tied down. We'll sit around the house for weeks without goin' any place, but just as soon as it rains so we can't get out, we bring out all our road maps and start figgerin' out all the travelin' we're gonna do as soon as it clears up. We'll stand all day lookin' at an excavatin' job, but if we had a job there as watchman, we'd be watchin' the clock all day.

A fisherman come down home one time and my Uncle Sanky sat on the bank and watched him fish for three days without movin' from the spot. Finally, the fisherman says, "You've been sittin' there watchin' me fish for three days—why don't you do some fishin' yourself?" And Uncle Sanky said, "I ain't got the patience."

King to Ask For Hearings On D.C. Plans

Senate Unit to Make Intensive Study of Reorganization.

Report of 4 Years Ago Will Be Considered by Committee.

An intensive study of proposals for District government reorganization will be undertaken by the Senate District Committee, it appeared yesterday, following a meeting of a special committee named to examine the Jacobs report on fiscal relations.

Following a conference with Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, the other member of the subcommittee, Chairman King said a program for hearings by a subcommittee will be recommended to the full committee, possibly today.

While he declined to disclose the program in detail until it is presented to the committee, Senator King said he thinks the Senate study should deal primarily with the District government reorganization phase of the report until the House District Committee has had time to act upon the revenue and fiscal relations proposals.

He pointed out that revenue measures must originate in the House, but there is nothing to prevent the Senate District Committee from discussing proposals for new District taxes and a change in the fiscal relations allocations.

The District government reorganization study, Senator King indicated, will center around the voluminous report made by a special committee of two District officials and the Federal budget director four years ago.

William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, who wrote most of the report, is now engaged in redrafting and condensing portions of it, King said, in anticipation of having it printed by the Senate.

District government reorganization proposals in the past have stirred up as bitter a local row as has the fiscal relations issue between the House and the Senate. It was for this reason that the special committee composed of Roberts, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan, and Budget Director Lewis Douglas never submitted its final conclusions to the Senate District Committee.

Roberts, however, submitted his private recommendations, which have never been made public, to Senator King.

The House District Committee today will receive the report of a subcommittee headed by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, on the Norton juvenile court bill and is expected to report the measure favorably.

Other bills, including the one to authorize construction of race tracks in the District, may be taken up if time permits, the committee clerk said. It was not known last night whether Chairman Norton will be well enough to return to her office.

A bill to authorize construction of a new building for the District recorder of deeds at a cost not to exceed $500,000 was introduced by Mrs. Norton yesterday. She sponsored a similar measure last year.

Columbia Hts. Citizens

Disapproving all recommendations of the Jacobs fiscal relations report, the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, meeting at the Fourth Presbyterian Church last night, demanded reconsideration of the report and voted to send delegates to the Congressional hearings.

The citizens went on record as against the purchase of 45 new one-man street cars by the Capital Transit Co. They particularly opposed placing the cars in operation on Fourteenth street northwest because of congested traffic conditions on that route.

Hearty approval of the proposal for a new Washington auditorium and of the bill providing for funds to study requirements for the building was registered by the group. It was also voted to approve the Rankin bill for creation of a Potomac Valley Authority.

The winter ban on parking between 2 a. m. and 8 a. m. was disapproved by the association. After a long debate, it was voted to ask that the Red rider, which forbids advocacy of communism in District schools, be retained.

Parish's Drive Nears Quota, $40,000 Raised

Canon Stokes Emphasizes $3,000 Is Conditional Contribution.

Canon Anson Phelps Stokes announced yesterday that contributions of $40,000 have been received in the campaign for $45,000 for St. Stephen and the Incarnation Parish. Canon Stokes, who is a member of the advisory committee for the drive, made the announcement at a meeting of the diocesan committee.

Canon Stokes emphasized the fact that of this amount $3,000 represents a conditional contribution depending upon the full amount being raised.

The parish committees under the general chairmanship of Lynch Luquer all exceeded their quotas, the reports being as follows: E. S. Dawson, $1,967; A. C. Houghton, $2,944; John L. McGrew, $1,179; George Fogle, $816; W. W. Naramore, $1,016; Mrs. Thomas F. Lowe, $585; Mrs. Walter N. Campbell, $628; Mrs. H. O. Cutting, $664; Mrs. A. C. Houghton, $679.50; Mrs. Mary Richardson, $858; Mrs. John L. McGrew, $738; Vestry, $6,711.57; making a total to date of $18,735.07 in 392 contributions reported by the parish quota, which is $3,700 in excess of its original quota of $15,000.

The diocesan committee reported $18,000 which brought the total raised in the diocese to 125 contributions amounting to $20,938. Efforts are being made to complete the funds by February 23 when the full amount must be in hand.

Canon Stokes read a letter from Bishop James E. Freeman, honorary chairman of the campaign, in which Bishop Freeman said: "I am more than delighted with the success thus far achieved and beg to express to you and all those who have participated in this effort my warm and sincere appreciation."

In speaking of the parish Canon Stokes expressed satisfaction with the increase in parish attendance under the Rev. Paul D. Wilbur, newly installed rector.

Civil Service Bill Hearings to Open

Public hearings on a bill to extend the civil service system to all executive departments of the Federal Government will start next Wednesday morning before the House Civil Service Committee, Chairman Ramspeck announced yesterday.

Ramspeck said he would invite members of the Brownlow Committee on Government Reorganization to apear before his committee and explain why they recommended that noncompetitive rather than competitive examinations be held.

Commissioner Hazen Seeking Official Greeter for District

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen is looking for a distinguished appearing District citizen who owns a top hat and doesn't mind shaking a few dozen hands every day.

And if such an individual is found, he is to become the city's "official greeter"—a la Grover Whelan.

The Commissioner, it appears, is slowly weakening under the pressure of official welcoming duties. As host and Chief Executive of the Nation's Capital, he finds himself swamped with hand-shaking-key-to-the-city duties.

New York and Chicago—not to mention a number of other major urban communities—have "official greeters," Hazen pointed out, and he can't see why Washington should not follow suit.

Applicants for the job must be prepared to meet and welcome visiting notables who arrive by plane, bus and train. And if they should all arrive at the same time, the greeter is expected to be all places at once.

Hazen suggested that some sort of a title should go with the position. He didn't like the sound of "greeter" and decided to let each applicant recommend his own title.

Prominent among possible appointees (if this thing happens to go any further) is Claude Owen, former president of the Washington Board of Trade, and Edgar Morris, present head of the trade board.

More 'City Fathers' Needed, Says Hazen

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen thinks the District needs more Commissioners. As his reason he cited today's program for the three city fathers. It follows:

Hearing on proposed civic auditorium—at least one Commissioner must attend.

All day inspection trip of District institutions with the House Appropriations sub-committee—at least two Commissioners must go.

Public hearing on zoning regulations—presence of all Commissioners required.

Mellon Gallery Is Designed With View to Beauty, Comfort

Simply Planned Structure Will Face Constitution Avenue; Construction Is Expected to Take Two or Three Years.

As might be expected when John Russell Pope draws the plans, the gallery which is to house the $50,000,000 art collection of Andrew W. Mellon will be a structure of beauty.

The architect's drawings of the building—to be known as the National Gallery of Art—were made public yesterday by the Fine Arts Commission, after President Roosevelt had examined them.

The gallery is to be built on simple lines except for a modified dome in the center, with columns beneath. It will front on Constitution avenue on an area in the mall extending from Seventh street to Fourth street, and will be on a line with the National Museum, and just southeast of the Archives Building, which also was designed by Pope.

Opposed "Museum Fatigue."

Behind the gallery is a vast amount of study and research. When Mr. Mellon decided to give his great art collection to the Nation, he already had some fairly definite ideas as to what kind of gallery he wanted to house that collection, and as to what he did not want.

He was determined that visitors to the gallery would not suffer from "museum fatigue." Hence Pope has designed a gallery which, by contrast to some, should be a restful sanctuary. There will be no long stairs to climb, and within the building will be two shaded garden courts. The gallery is to cost approximately $9,000,000, and will be financed by Mr. Mellon.

Dr. Charles Moore, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, said yesterday he expected it would be two or three years before the gallery is completed. What kind of stone is to be used, it was said, has not yet been decided.

Street Closing Disputed.

President Roosevelt this week sent a message to Congress recommending that legislation be passed accepting the Mellon collection for the people of the United States. On the Senate side, Vice President Garner sent the communication to Senator Connally, of Texas, chairman of the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Senator Connally said he would start hearings on the proposed legislation at an early date. About the only contest foreseen is over the closing of Sixth street in the Mall. Southwest interests have opposed the closing of the street. To appease them, it will be proposed that Seventh street be widened, and likewise Fourth and Third streets.

D. C. Boys Chosen President's Guard For Scout Speech

Three Washington Eagle Scouts will form part of a Scout guard of honor for Presilent Roosevelt when he broadcasts from the White House Monday to celebrate the twenty-seventh anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America.

Two have been chosen. They are Wayne Dorman, 16, of Troop 5, and James Bowes, 17, of Troop 69. The third will be chosen from the ranks of the Sea Scouts. There will be eight in the entire guard of honor.

The President, who is honorary president of the Scouts and who has been active with them since 1921, will be introduced by Walter W. Head, president of the organization. His address will go on the air at 5:30 p. m.

Troops throughout the country will hold special meetings to hear the President, and Dr. James E. West, chief Scout executive, give the Scout oath in the annual recommitment ceremony observed on anniversary day.

Speed Is Sought In Cannon Suit

Concluding the "proxy" testimony of Bishop James Cannon, jr., attorneys moved yesterday to speed up the trial of the bishop's $500,000 libel suit against Representative George Holden Tinkham.

The bishop's testimony, taken in a deposition in Sibley Hospital last June, was closed with the statement that he did not know what his reputation in the community, with respect to "good or bad," was. Bishop Cannon is ill in North Carolina and is unable to attend the trial in which he seeks damages for statements made about him by Representative Tinkham.

Following Bishop Cannon's deposition, testimony of E. C. Jameson, New York capitalist, who is alleged to have donated $63,500 to the elderly bishop when the latter was head of the anti-Smith campaign in the South, was begun.

Justice Jennings Bailey adjourned court shortly after Jameson's testimony began. Sessions will be resumed today.

Liquor Sale by Drink In District Is Asked

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, author of the bill to permit Sunday sales of liquor in Washington, yesterday introduced a measure to remove the restriction against the sale of liquor by the drink at lunch counters.

He explained that as beer and wine are now sold over lunch counters he thought that the same privilege should be accorded other alcoholic beverages.

Police Raid New Gambling House; Equipment Seized

Armed with a warrant charging operation of a gambling establishment, the raiders, led by Sergt. George C. Deyoe, found seven men and a quantity of alleged race betting paraphernalia in the place.

No arrests were made, police said, because the gambler was not "at home." Several telephones, a loud speaker, race horse charts and run-down sheets were confiscated.

The second floor was elaborately equipped with new furniture and fixtures the police said. Work had not been completed on the first floor. Sergt. Deyoe asserted the "joint" had only opened Monday.

Layette-Makers Receive Bid To Visit White House Today

Social climbers, lobbyists and other selfish individuals have resorted to all kinds of stratagems to win an invitation to the White House, with varying success.

One way to get to the mansion, it turned out last night, is think nothing of it, but to make a better layette than others—a layette being a sort of baby's trousseau, consisting of diapers, woolen shirts, bootees and the like.

Fifty-five proud and happy women, WPA workers who make superior layettes on a sewing project in Atlantic City, are coming here today at the invitation of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, and they will be her guests at the White House at 4 p. m.

The story behind the invitation is this:

Several months ago, a prominent New Dealer visited the project in Atlantic City, took a fancy to the work the women were doing, and sent some samples to Mrs. Roosevelt. The First Lady was impressed, so much so that she wrote the workers a letter of praise. They in turn sent her a layette for her new grandchild, Kate, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt. Thereafter, Mrs. Roosevelt invited them to the White House.

Traveling in two buses, the WPA women will leave Atlantic City at 7 o'clock this morning, arriving here probably about 12:30 o'clock. Until 4 o'clock, when they go to the White House, the women will make a tour of the city, stopping off at Garfinckel's department store, where an example of their work is on display in a window.

The aged woman was taken to Garfield Hospital, where physicians said they did not consider her condition serious. The car was being operated by Motorman Lawrence W. Buckley.

The others, Margaret Harley, 18, 417 Twenty-fifth street northwest, Betty Tapscott, 52, same address, and Muriel R. Juhl, 23, 1812 Ingleside terrace northwest, escaped with cuts and bruises. They were released after treatment.

Habitual Criminal Bill Reintroduced in House

A bill to authorize a step-up in penalties for habitual criminals in the District was reintroduced in the House yesterday by Representative Reed (Republican), of Illinois. The measure, which passed the House last session, is an outgrowth of the special House investigation of crime in Washington.

It provides that upon conviction of a second offense involving a felony the sentence shall be the maximum term provided by law, and for any subsequent convictions not less than 15 years.

Woman Brings Peace Formula From Budapest

Mrs. Magda de Spur Expects Feminine Leaders to Speed War Ban.

A formula for world peace which has nothing to do with disarmament or treaty making was expounded yesterday by a blonde from Budapest.

"The women of all countries should get to know one another," said Mrs. Magda de Spur, flashing blue eyes and gesturing arms emphasizing each word. "When they know one another, they will like one another. Then"—with a flourish of finality—"no more wars."

Washington is the third stop on a lecture tour which will take this golden-haired ambassador of good will to Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Kansas City, Seattle and a dozen or so other cities within the next month. Everywhere she goes she will seek to build up a better understanding between American women and their sisters across the sea.

Aids Women's Week.

Dr. de Spur—she received her Ph. D. at the University of Budapest—also will drum up interest in the International Women's Week program which will be held in the Hungarian capital next August. She is chairman of the executive committee on arrangements.

Five hundred women attended the 1936 conclave.

"This year there will be t'ousands, I hope," hoped the doctor, snuggled on a divan in the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

Today she will address the Soroptomist Club (Mrs. de Spur is president of the Budapest Chapter) and Saturday she will speak at a luncheon at A. A. U. W. headquarters. Though she disembarked less than three weeks ago, already she has delivered six lectures in New York and one in Boston.

This is her second visit to Washington. The previous one was five years ago, when she was a delegate to a women's international conference.

Recalls Former Visit.

"It was the spring and I flew here and your cherry blossoms below were so beautiful they looked like a big pink whale," she said.

Mrs. de Spur thinks American women are ne plus ultra, le dernier cri, el meow del gato—in pure English, swell. She hopes that lots and lots of them will come to the Danube country in August so her countrywomen will have an opportunity to see for themselves just how elegant their sisters from Philadelphia, Sioux City and Birmingham are.

Though she is a member or of- and professional clubs, Mrs. de Spur ficer of a long string of cultural hurries to explain that this does not mean she neglects her husband. Women can have their careers and still keep family life closely knit, she thinks.

Joint Drive By Hospitals Is Authorized

More Funds Are Needed to Meet Present, Future Deficit.

Nine hospitals, affiliated with the Community Chest, have been authorized to conduct a joint campaign for $180,000 to meet deficits incurred last year and similar deficits which loom for this year.

Authority to make the appeal was given yesterday by the board of trustees of the Community Chest, meeting at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building.

In the same motion which granted permission for the hospitals to make this appeal, the by-laws, which had formerly forbidden any solicitation of Community Chest subscribers by institutional members for current expenses, were amended to permit this appeal.

Debate Situation.

The whole question of permitting the separate drive for funds, according to Chest President Clarence Phelps Dodge, is the "desparate situation" in regard to the care of the sick which was left unsolved when the Chest failed to reach its goal last November.

At the same meeting the urgency of the relief situation and the inadequacy of relief funds in the family agencies was stressed. The trustees voted to authorize the executive committee of the Chest to work out some plan whereby the family agencies might appeal for help through the churches, if a consultation with the leaders of the various church denominations proved that such a plan would be considered by the churches.

In opening the meeting, President Dodge declared "the problem has become bigger than a Chest problem. It is a community problem, one that the community will have to solve." The only question he said is, "to meet the greatest needs of Washington in the best possible way."

Cannot Be Budgeted.

The Rev. Calvert E. Buck, superintendent of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, said that "the hospital doc not stand in the same relation to the Chest as other agencies because its needs cannot be budgeted. We have to take in the sick who apply for help whether they have money or not. The hospitals cannot turn them away. The hospital cannot plead that the Community Chest has not sufficient funds to pay for their care. It simply has to take them. This has brought about the situation as it exists today."

For 1936 the Chest budgeted $276,000 to hospitals to pay for the care of persons certified by the Central Admitting Bureau. This fell $103,000 short of meeting the actual costs of service to people eligible for Chest aid. With an increased population and an increasing amount of illness, it is deemed fair to assume that demands will be as heavy or heavier in 1937 than last year, and again the Chest has been able to budget only $276,000 for this work.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, opposed such a campaign, holding that some other method, perhaps through forcing public action, could be evolved.

New Drive Suggested.

Elwood Street, director of Public Welfare, suggested that the Chest hold a supplementary campaign, saying that there was nothing in the by-laws to prevent such a campaign.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest, pointed out that supplementary campaigns by Chests in other cities had been notably unsuccessful and that only one city had ever held a second one.

William J. Flather suggested that if Congress would authorize proper payment for public welfare patients treated at private hospitals, it would do much to remedy the situation.

Suggestions for radio and newspaper drives were offered, but the final vote was in favor of permitting the hospitals to organize their own appeal, subject to approval of details by the executive committee of the Chest.

Capt. Nick Hope Star Attraction At Club Troika

Authentic Russian Artists Offer Diversified Bill of Entertainment.

By Chanticleer.

Playing everything except "On Wisconsin" and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny," Capt. Nick Hope (he would have played those, too, but the other artists were stomping their feet in the wings) is lifting the Club Troika customers off their feet this week with an accordion brought alive with his nimble Russian fingers.

Considering the fact that the accordion is not the most bravo-rousing instrument of the night club melange and the further fact that he is spotted on a bill studded with a dozen or so of the foremost Russian entertainers in this country today, Capt. Nick's success is little short of amazing. He and his wind machine get the call over excellent competition.

Theer are Miss Zinoida Nicolina, a queenly blonde with a soprano as neat as her figure, who sings in seven languages—yes, and Scandinavian, too—and Marusia Sava, "singer of songs," as Master of Ceremonies Mischa Markoff quaintly explains her country's leading exponent of gypsy blues numbers.

Markoff, by the way, affords the only opportunity for the patrons to complain. He doesn't sing enough. Lolik and Orlik, resplendent in costumes of the Ukraine, dazzle the guests with two excellent dances; Yasha Nikogossoff whirls through a ritualtistic flaming dagger dance known to few native Russians in this age of jazz, and Sasha Bartinevsky presides at the piano like the composer-maestro that he is.

The bill carries comedy and tragedy; a bit of light opera, a bit of pathos. It is a succession of entertainment features in the true Russian manner.

Jimmy Bright has been made master of ceremonies at Maryland Club Gardens. With Fran Trappe's orchestra. A new addition at this suburban rendezvous is the team of Leila and Connie, toe tap specialists. And, of course, Kitty Dangler and her partner—Cornelia, the snake.

McCormick and Kidd are headlining the Cocoanut Grove show again this week. They're the comedy song and dance team from the Great White Way. Ray Beck, who has been away from the local precincts for some time, is back and singing here, taking his bows with the Hollywood Revue—new faces and steps. Positively beaming with Broadway dancing maidens. A new Grove policy is cocktails from 35 cents.

La Paree runs the gamut of floor show entertainment currently—from the roller skating Flying Wheels to the six Debutantes. All under the heading of The Rhapsody of Rhythm. Occupying a featured spot are the Harpers—ballroom dance team—bringing to Washington the grace and delicacy of an old lace minuet transposed into modern tempo. Al Sakol and his band for your dancing.

Petite Joan Alexander opened last night at the Carlton's El Patio supper club in a series of original dance numbers. Highlight: her "rainy day" number in raincoat, galoshes and rain hat. And umbrella. Sande Williams and his unique dance tunes throughout the evening.

Arthur Warren and his ork stopped the dancers at Wardman Park the night of the President's Ball—with a medley of the President's favorites. The "Home on the Range" number did the work. Maestro Warren uses "cocoanut shell" accompaniment for this old reliable as an unusual effect. Gives a horse-on-the trail background.

Planter's Punch is still the big favorite, according to the Shoreham's One-to-Two habitues. Also the funny gentlemen of the Curfew Band are making a hit with the post-midnighters. Earlier in the evening, however, Leonidoff brings cheers for his melodies singing the requests of an appreciative audience. Irma Lane, neighbor girl from Baltimore, is the Shoreham's solo dancer this week.

With regrets from all, Eddie Elkins goes into his final week at the Raleigh Pall Mall Room with arrangements already completed for a return late in the Spring. He has pulled 'em in ever since he came, thereby maintaining his reputation as "good luck Eddie." Sally Evans, who sings romantic ditties at the piano, also leaves—for New York, much to the sorrow of her many friends here. Kirk and Nadine are appearing on the floor this week out-doing Astaire and Rogers.

Jack and Leo are together again at the Mayfair. This is the same team, the original combination, that amused patrons a little over a year ago. Leo has been at Asbury Park and is frankly thrilled at being back among Washingtonians after such a long absence.

This is Barn Dance night at the Dude Ranch. Very successful, too. Berk Motley and his orchestra play nightly, with the floor honors going to Peggy and Billie Parker, dancers, and Betty Ann, formerly vocalist with Rudy Vallee on the air. Sunday Night Club festivities are open to those with cards only.

Helen Malcolm, tireless little vocalist at the Ambassador Hi-Hat, is popularizing one of these seldom heard ditties entitled "Laziest Gal in Town." (You really don't hear this one very often.) Saturday afternoons, between 1:30 and 7, are the best times to find Helen at the big piano ready for your requests. She's joined at 5 by the Royal Hawaiians.

Wardman Park Metronome Room Murals Study in Contrast

On the Air Today

The "Cavalcade" tonight will pay tribute to a "ham" broadcaster—a blind operator at that. He is Robert Gunderson, 18-year-old amateur radio operator of Old Bridge, N. J. Robert made a name for himself when he sat at his receiver and transmitter for two days and nights relaying important messages from the Middle West to the Red Cross at the height of the flood troubles along the Ohio.

His appearance in the "Cavalcade" brings to light an interesting coincidence. Producers of the program had planned some time ago to salute America's amateur broadcasters and prepared a preliminary script entitled "Minute Men of the Air." When the flood situation developed the script was set ahead, hastily done over and Gunderson selected to appear tonight.

When Robert was asked to appear in the program he made a bargain. He laughingly agreed—provided he could visit the Columbia studios in New York and "see" the master control rooms. Yesterday he was personally escorted through rooms of gadgets he loves and listened to descriptions of systems and circuits that still are Greek to the layman.

As to that coincidence. The original script was based on the experiences of a blind "ham" who stayed at his transmitter day and night relaying messages from a scene of disaster. Then Robert actually did what the script called for. His identity was made known to program producers when he absented himself from the New York Institute for the Education of the Blind.

"There was a 'ham' from Evansville who was trying desperately to raise somebody in New Jersey," said Robert. "I was at my set and relayed his message. From then on it was exciting, and I was flooded with messages, at one time taking them in at the rate of 42 to the hour."

To the uninitiated, a "ham operator" is one who has receiving and broadcasting equipment in his home and who works other "hams" in two-way conversation on frequencies, or wave lengths, not in the normal broadcasting band where the entertainment programs are found. "Cavalcade" is at 8 p. m., WJSV.

WOL sends its first musical show to the coast-to-coast Mutual Network tonight—a full hour of music and little talking (according to announcement) under auspices of the Red Cross. Here and there: Bea Lillie has signed a movie contract and goes to Hollywood in July . . . Frank Parker's stage show, "Howdy, Stranger," has been successful and plans are under way to produce another show this spring . . . Evidently Dick Powell kenw what he was doing when he left "Hollywood Hotel." Four sponsors are ready to buy his new program with Leo Forbstein's orchestra and the Dudley Chambers chorus of 40 voices . . . John Boles is being auditioned for a new half-hour show but there's nothing definite on it . . . WOL reports that the Florida racetrack contest (Saturday afternoons) is the biggest mail drawer of the past month. Score: Contest, 2,810; Art Brown, 396—for second half of month.

Somebody opined the other day that Arthur Godfrey had "stuck his neck out" in referring to a prospective network contract. The idea was—what happens if Uncle Arthur doesn't get the contract? Won't he be embarrassed? Not Uncle Arthur. There's gold in the local hills and I think I can assure you that no one—least of all Arthur—will be chagrined for referring to any chickens before the eggs hatch.

SPORTS — The Washington Post — SPORTS

* XX — WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1937 — 19

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Sure, Shanty Hogan would pose on the scales, smile for the photographers and even do a pirouette out there on the Griffith Stadium office floor yesterday if it would do the cameramen any good, but baseball's Fat Man isn't really kidding in his battle with his weight.

POVICH.

Shanty's serious, he said, and he said it seriously, leastwise it seemed that way as he concluded his fat-man act for the sake of the pictures and prepared to fare forth to Hot Springs, Ark., to renew his pound-shedding process.

"There's a catching job on this Washington ball club and I want it," the Somerville, Mass., Irishman told his listeners. "Twenty more pounds that went the way of my other flesh and I'm apt to be the first-string catcher on this team. When Mr. Griffith said I'd be a big asset to the team if I could weigh in at 220, he wasn't telling me any news. I knew it.

"There never was any complaint about my catching, or my hitting, either. A little more weight off around the middle and I'll be able to throw with the best of 'em. Fat as I was last season, I didn't do so bad. And I'll be quicker on the bases, too. I was a fool to let my weight pile up on me. I came into the big leagues at 210 pounds and at 220 I'll still be a pretty good catcher."

Big Hogan knew whereof he spoke when he said there was a catching job open on the Washington club. With any other team his pound-shedding efforts may have been wasted, but Manager Bucky Harris is in a mood to give serious consideration to any catcher who has a chance to excel Cliff Bolton. Hogan has been a better catcher than Bolton and if one becomes confidential with Washington pitchers, one will be told that Hogan still is a better catcher than Bolton.

The vagaries of the prize ring are strange, indeed. Joe Louis, at the height of his success after his spectacular knockouts of Primo Carnera, Max Baer and King Levinsky, was denied a shot at the world heavyweight championship. Yet on the heels of his disappointing showing against Bob Pastor—the most dismal chapter in Louis' professional career—he is matched with the champion.

Of course, there is logic in the presumption that Braddock's manager took due note of the Louis-Pastor proceedings and decided that Braddock could have his champion's cut of a Louis fight gate and perhaps keep his title, too, without the same great risk that was apparent before Pastor held Louis off for ten rounds. Anyway, it appears more than coincidence that Braddock did not accept the bout until after Louis' invincibility was dispelled.

Louis' fight stock plummeted rapidly as a result of the Pastor proceedings. Certain critics have likened his inability to knock out Pastor to Jack Dempsey's troubles with the veteran Tommy Gibbons in the ill-starred Shelby, Mont., affair but those who do are merely complimenting both Pastor and Louis.

Dempsey labored through 15 rounds in a vain effort to land his knockout punch against Gibbons but Dempsey, very much unlike Louis, was fighting a master of the boxing art. Gibbons was a cagey veteran, famed for his skill at close quarters and in standing off punchers. Louis' foe, Pastor, was distinctly a third-rater, a man never accorded high standing in the profession, and Louis' failure to dispose of him before the limit is a serious reflection of the Detroiter's ability.

Granting that it is difficult to knock out a fellow who won't stand up and fight but back-pedals from the opening gong, as Pastor did, Louis nevertheless had in front of him a third-rater. That he didn't re-adjust his tactics at some time during the late rounds to cope with the situation dignifies the belief held by many that Louis is a single-track fighter who can beat only those who attempt to rush him.

In Short—

Coach Heinie Miller, of the Maryland University boxing team, in commenting on the death of Jack Eastham, V. M. I. cadet following the bouts with Maryland, declared that Mike Lombardo, Eastham's opponent, was specifically ordered to pull his punches . . . Miller gave Lombardo that order and issued similar orders to Nedomatsky and Gormley, of the Maryland team, after noting the appearance made by the opponents of the trio during the weighing-in . . . The tough luck of the U. S. Davis Cup team in drawing Japan as its first opponent is a break for Washington . . . which will be the scene of the match which looms far more attractive than a match in which the Americans would have been cast against Mexico or Australia . . . Joe Cronin will attempt to recover from Clark Griffith part of the $250,000 Griffith received from the Red Sox for Cronin's contract . . . he will attempt to get it back at the rate of a dime a hole on the golf course at Orlando, Fla., where the Cronins shortly will visit with the Griffiths before moving to the Red Sox' camp at Sarasota.

Jack Doyle Can Close Up Now: Dean Has Awarded Pennants

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 2.—Predictions flew thick and fast today when Dizzy Dean and a bunch of American Leaguers got together, but the predictions were all Dizzy's.

"The Cards will finish first next season, provided I sign—if I don't they'll finish seventh or eighth," was his first offering.

He predicted the Detroit Tigers would return to the top in the American League with Hank Greenberg, out most of last season, back in the lineup.

"With Hank back, they should go to town," he said. "That was what was wrong with them last season—they didn't have any power at bat."

Others in the group, on a beach outing, were Greenberg and Goose Goslin of Detroit, Jimmy Foxx of the Boston Red Sox and Lynn Lary, recently traded to Cleveland by the St. Louis Browns. They didn't have as much to say as Dizzy.

"We should have a good club this year," agreed Greenberg, but he wouldn't predict a pennant. "We'd like to meet the Cards in a series again."

Goslin, Foxx and Lary likewise shied from pennant predictions, except for Foxx's observation that "I'd hate for my wife to depend on our winning the pennant."

"A new baseball trade is in the air," Dizzy resumed. "I'm trying to trade Branch Rickey for Tom Yawkey and I'll give Rickey my next year's pay to boot.

"If I don't sign before the season starts, Frankie Frisch'll be nuts before the seoson's over.

"I'm in the best condition I've ever been in. I've been playing golf and fishing all winter, and I feel fine. I'll win as many games this season as I've averaged the past three."

He said his brother, Paul, who retired last season because of a sore arm and is now at Houston, Tex., will return to the majors this season and will win 20 games.

Furr Beaten In New York

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—Saverio Turiello, clever Italian welterweight scored an impressive victory over Phil Furr, of Washington, in an eight-round bout before a crowd of 10,000 at the Coliseum tonight. Turiello weighed 147 and Furr a half pound less.

Turiello gained a big advantage in the first round when he connected with two solid lefts that partially stunned his rival. Furr didn't recover entirely until the fourth, when he used a left jab to good advantage. Toward the end of the round Furr's nose was bloodied in a fast exchange.

Twenty pounds down, 20 to go, that is the situation with Catcher Frank "Shanty" Hogan, pictured weighing in at Griffith Stadium yesterday after Clark Griffith's ultimatum that he report at no heavier than 220 pounds. Hogan, who has already shed 20 pounds, will go into preliminary training at Hot Springs to reach the required figure. Assistant Trainer Frankie Baxter is superintending the weighing-in while Pitcher Joe Cascarella looks on.

Patty Berg's 80 Wins Medal Honors

While three of her nearest rivals ran into trouble on the 550-yard fifteenth hole, Patty played the double dog leg in the prescribed par 5 to gain a good margin.

Their misplays on the fifteenth hole, the longest on the course, spent the accumulated strokes that would have let Jean Bauer, Marion Miley and Kathryn Hemphill equal or better the Minneapolis red-heads' round. The trio finished with 81's.

Mrs. Elsie Haynes, of Washington, scored 44-51—95. Scores of other District of Columbia golfers follow: Mrs. L. G. Pray, 45-51—96; Mrs. Charlotte S. Stern Washington, 51-55—106; Mrs. J. T. Powell, 56-54—120, and Mrs. C. F. Rhodes, Washington, 68-67—135.

Miss Berg carded on the third, eighth, eleventh and twelfth holes. She was out in 39 and home in 41, gaining a stroke on par for each nine holes.

Others to break 90 were Mrs. Leon Solomon, of Memphis, 43-46—89; Miss Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, 41-44—85; Miss Jean Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 40-49—89; Miss Alberta Haycraft, of Minneapolis, 43-46—89, and Mrs. David Sterrett, of Hutchinson, Kans., 45-43—88.

Miss Holm's Mark Beaten.

Amsterdam, Feb. 2 (AP).—Dina Senff, the Olympic champion, set a world record of 2:46.6 for the 200-meters backstroke swim tonight. The former record of 2:48.7 was set by Eleanor Holm Jarrett at Toledo, Ohio, last year.

Schaefer Downs Hoppe, Sets Mark

New York, Feb. 2 (AP).—Jake Schaefer, of Chicago, broke the American high-run record for 28.2 balkline billiards, established earlier in the day by his rival, Willie Hoppe, as he increased his lead in their 2,500-point challenge match at the Strand Academy to 750-627 tonight.

Schaefer won both afternoon and evening blocks today to gain his margin of 123 points, scoring by 250 to 230 and 250 to 157. Tonight's block gave the Chicagoan his most decisive victory.

Schaefer made his record run right at the start of the block to gain an overwhelming lead. He scored 113 points, which were added to his unfinished run of 15 at the end of the afternoon block. Earlier Hoppe had made a run of 123 to shatter the previous record he had set up in their match at Chicago last week.

Grant, Budge Advance in Net Play

By the Associated Press.

Surfside, Fla., Feb. 2.—A head cold bothered Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant today while he and Donald Budge moved nearer another meeting in the invitation tennis tournament at the Surf Club.

The Atlanta mite was not extended to dispose of his third round opponent, Richard W. Seabury, of Miami Beach, 6—1, 6—1, but expressed doubt of his reaching the final and an encounter with the top-ranking Californian he has defeated in two earlier tourneys this year.

Bitsy meets Ellwood Cooke, of Los Angeles, in the quarter-finals tomorrow. If he wins, his semi-final opponent will be the victor in a match between Charles R. Harris, of Palm Beach, winner of the inaugural event last year, and Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles.

Budge had a little harder battle from his third-round foe, Vernon Marcum, of Lakeland, Fla., but triumphed, 6—0, 6—1. The tussle was closer than the scores indicate, four games going to deuce in the first set. In the second set, Marcum broke through the redhead's service twice and held two of his own. Budge was in top form, however, and his backhand was especially effective.

Lazzeri to Stage First Holdout Of Career

Yankee Merely Wants Back $4,000 Cut He Got in '32; Swells List to 7.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—In the evening of a brilliant career, Anthony Michael Lazzeri today was planning his first holdout on the New York Yankees.

He wants $16,000 to play second base this season. The Yankees offered him $12,000. This is what he received last season and every season since 1931, when he was cut $4,000 after a bad year.

Lazzeri, as silent and fair a ball player as the league has ever known, is not "demanding" anything.

"I've always taken what the club offered me without squawking," he said today. "I had a two-year contract at $16,000 a year in 1930-1931. Things didn't go right the last year, and I took a cut. But I think I've made my comeback now and I'd like to get the cut back."

Is Seventh Holdout.

Lazzeri talked to Yankee Business Manager Ed Barrow on the phone and asked for an appointment. Barrow asked him to come in tomorrow or Thursday.

Lazzeri is the seventh player to ask the club for a raise. The others are First Baseman Lou Gehrig, Pitchers Johnny Murphy and Vito Tamulis, and Outfielders Joe DiMaggio, George Selkirk and Jake Powell. None of these has signed yet.

Pitcher Irving (Bump) Hadley, who won 14 and lost only 4 last season, signed today and this became the first Yankee regular to come to terms.

The Yanks were celebrating this fact when their regular third baseman, Red Rolfe, came in from his home in Penacock, N. H., to have his right hand X-rayed. He has been bothered by a stone bruise and was ordered by Dr. Edwin A. Spies, club physician, to have the injured hand photographed. The results of the examination won't be known until tomorrow.

"I've been around for a long time (since 1926)," Tony said. People have the idea I'm older than I really am. I was only 33 last December. But I've been around long enough to know when to quit. And when I can't really go out there, I'll be the first to suggest I get out."

Maryland Anti-Horse Tampering Bill Aimed At Racketeers Now Subject Only to Fines

By Walter Haight.

"Maryland, I believe you've got something there"—that's how Bob Burns, the Sage of Arkansas, would put it, and every horse lover, horse better or square-shooting human being will second the motion. Maryland is about to put a set of rock-crushing teeth in a law aimed to put behind cold steel bars any persons caught sponging or tampering with a horse in the State. Maryland is not going to rely on pasty racing rules to deal out suspensions or fines to those heartless racketeers who bit into the soul of racing at Bowie last fall. Maryland is going to match cruelty to horses with the best weapon she legally possesses—the penitentiary.

Here is the bill introduced in the Maryland Legislature by Delegate Charles C. Marbury, chairman of the judiciary committee: "A person who willfully or maliciously interfers with, injures, destroys or tampers with or who willfully sets on foot, instigates, engages in or in any way furthers any act by which any horse used for the purposes of racing, breeding or competitive exhibition of skill, breed or stamina, is interfered with, injured, destroyed or tampered with, or any act tending to produce such interference, injury, himself or another is guilty of a felony, punishable by imprisonment in the Maryland Penitentiary for not less than one year or more than three years."

Under the present Maryland law trespassing is about the only charge that can be placed against persons, who poison, sponge or dope a race horse. Of course, the race track officials can "eject from the grounds" or "suspend for the meeting" or perhaps "fine $100" persons who are caught tampering with horses.

These disciplinary measures are not feared by the type of culprit who would jam a sponge up the nose of a favorite so that he and his associates might win a bet on another horse. They are laughed off by unscrupulous trainers and horsemen who use narcotics on horses to make them run or to stop them. They mean little in the lives of those who have in the past destroyed horses with poison in order to eliminate them from a race. They are nothing to the gambler who attempts to bribe a stableman so that his henchmen can "get to" a horse, as tampering with a horse is known in track parlance.

But they can't laugh off, belittle or snear at a term of from one to three years in the penitentiary. Of course, the culprit will have to be caught, he will have to be tried and he will have to be convicted. In

Holm Avers She Still Is Amateur

By John R. Vosburgh.

Eleanor Holm, world famous swimmer, flung back a vigorous reply yesterday to a statement by Daniel J. Ferris, executive secretary of the National A. A. U., that Miss Holm "was mistaken" in saying she had never been suspended by the Metropolitan division of the A. A. U.

The youthful holder of eleven national championships made the statement, Monday, appearing in a swim show at the Shoreham sponsored by The Post, that she had never been suspended from the A. A. U. She also asserted that approval of the exhibition here by the District A. A. U. clearly established her status as an amateur despite expulsion from the Olympic team last summer, an action not taken for professionalism.

Ferris, according to the Associated Press, said that the Washington association of the A. A. U. was in error in permitting Miss Holm to participate in the event. The secretary said he had received a letter November 30 from the Metropolitan A. A. U., of which Miss Holm is a member, notifying him of her suspension, taken as the result of her expulsion from the Olympic team for training rules infractions.

Issues Formal Statement.

"I must insist," Miss Holm said in a formal statement last night, "that I have never been notified of any suspension by the A. A. U. Mr. Ferris says he received a letter from the Metropolitan district notifying him of my suspension, but he doesn't say that I ever was notified—and I wasn't.

"The A. A. U. and the Olympic committee are two separate organizations, and since I have never done anything to offend the A. A. U. and any trouble I had was with the Olympic officials, I naturally didn't inquire about my status, which had never been questioned so far as the A. A. U. is concerned.

"A New York newspaper wanted to stage a water meet after the Olympics, having me swim in the meet, but the paper was unable to get any ruling on my status from the National A. A. U., and I swam against a group of amateurs.

"I do not think the Washington Association of the A. A. U. erred in permitting me to participate in the water carnival here Monday afternoon, but I think the local officials did the only thing they could, as I

2 Bouts to Test Garden's Grip On Braddock

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 2.—Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock, lured on by the prospect of getting $500,000 for defending his title against Joe Louis in Chicago, joined Promoter Mike Jacobs' colors today by agreeing to two warm-up bouts at Uncle Mike's Hippodrome.

As Jimmy Johnson, of Madison Square Garden, holder of Braddock's contract to risk his title against Max Schmeling next June, stuck in his trenches with unusual silence, the heavyweight champion agreed to box two opponents for Jacobs February 15.

Braddock will meet Eddie Kotwisca, former New Jersey amateur heavyweight champion, and Eddie Cook, a big Negro from Havana. Unless the New York State Athletic Commission insists each fight be four rounds, in accordance with present regulations, Braddock will box two rounds with each.

Under New York State law, the matches cannot be billed as exhibitions, although that's all they amount to.

The reason for the two bouts, to be fought on the same card, quite plainly is to test the contract held by the Garden for Braddock's services. Anyway, it's an open challenge to the Garden, which said it would think about it when the time came for the Hippodrome fights.

Promoter Jacobs flew in from his Chicago conferences last night. He spent a busy day with Joe Gould, manager of Braddock, and lawyers. He had no announcement.

District May Get Finals of Zone Play

Australia vs. Mexico in North America's Other Bracket.

Germany Is Favored by Drawing; France in Lower Half Play.

Along with announcement of the 1937 Davis Cup drawings yesterday came the bright prospect for Washington tennis fans of seeing the United States play Japan here on May 13. Lawrence A. Baker, treasurer of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, said last night that Washington is to be given serious consideration at the scene of the matches.

"Because of the early date on which the teams must meet," Baker said, "it is highly probable Washington will be selected. Weather conditions would hardly permit play farther north, whereas early May is an ideal season for tennis here."

According to the Associated Press, the United States drew Japan and Australia drew Mexico in the draw yesterday in London. No other countries are entered in the North American zone.

A United States-Japan match here would be the first Davis Cup test played in Washington since 1933 when the Americans turned back the Argentine at the Chevy Chase Club. The latter would probably be the site of the projected match this year. Baker emphasized that fast-drying courts, such as Chevy Chase possesses, would be vitally necessary.

May Play at Wardman.

The Wardman Park Hotel courts, another possible location, are not fast-drying. The suggestion was made by Baker that if the match were definitely designated for Washington, it might be feasible to con-

Log Takes Fifth Straight Winter Race, Beating Out Goldey F.

C. Kurtsinger Rides Filly In Dash

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 2.—Elmer Dale Shaffer's 3-year-old filly Log, unbeaten in competition this winter, raced to her fifth straight victory in the Regret Purse, a 6-furlong dash that shared feature honors with the Arcadia Handicap, for older horses, here today. Picking up her heaviest impost of 120 pounds, the brown daughter of Bull Dog was well in hand as Charlie Kurtsinger guided her over the line a half length before Goldey F., which sports the silks of Mrs. W. A. Bridges. H. W. Jackson's Clamorous was third, two lengths away.

Log covered the distance in 1:10 4-5 and paid $4.40 for $2. Of the seven starters, only Goldey F. was nominated for the $20,000 added Flamigo Stakes to be run February 27, but owners have until February 20 to add their horses as supplementary entries.

Kurtsinger Scores Double.

The triumph gave Charlie Kurtsinger, leading local rider, his second score of the day. The "Flying Dutchman" had Log running head-and-head with Goldey F. until rounding out of the backstretch, where he sent the Kentucky-owned sensation into a clear advantage. Goldey F. dropped back and allowed Lucky Jean to replace her in the runner-up position after entering the stretch, but the latter stopped and Goldey F. came on again. Log had the race won and was not in danger.

The racing strip today was at its best again, as evidenced by the remarkable performance of Brown & Fetter's 2-year-old filly, Sally Shall, in the opening dash. The newcomer covered 3 furlongs in 33 seconds flat, thus equaling the world record over the straightaway course, previously shared by two A. G. Vanderbilt youngsters—Airflame and Balking. Sally Shall paid $13.20.

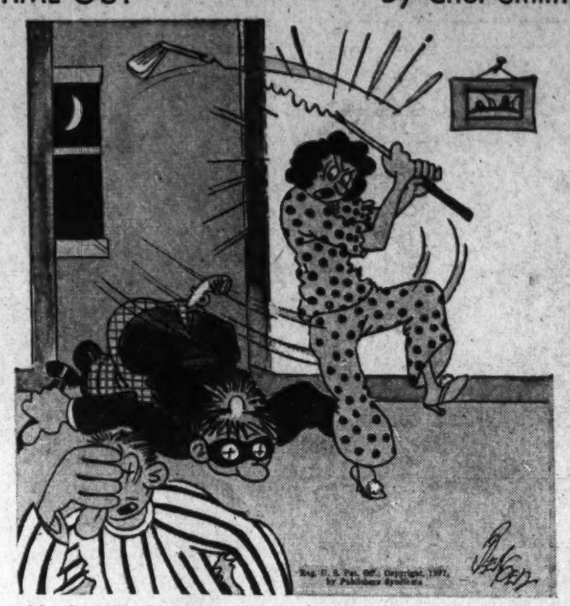
TIME OUT — By Chet Smith



My Gawd! Using my favorite putter on a darn burglar!

At the Post . . .

Selections at Hialeah.

Dear Al:

Plans are on foot to revive racing in Cuba . . . The horses, Chancer, owned by R. L. Gerry, and Chancing, owned by Phil Bieber, are full brothers . . . Chance Play is their daddy and Courtly their dam . . . Fred M. Alger, jr., Detroit sportsman, is at this track . . . he owns Azucar, the former steeplechaser which won the first running of the $100,000 added Santa Anita Handicap . . . Azucar will carry the Alger colors in the $50,000 added Widener here March 6 . . . Willie Doyle, assistant paddock judge at Hialeah, is from Marlboro, Md. . . . The few native Floridians in Miami seem to be working with the chamber of commerce . . . at official functions they turn up in white flannel dress suits . . . and they never fail to refer to the "usual severe weather" in California . . . Whopper is the largest horse on the grounds and of the older horses, Zay is the smallest . . . The favorites have been faring poorly here of late . . . and my selections are setting some kind of a record for being second . . . although we have been slipping one home here and there . . . I've been thinking about advertising for Clocker Mike in the monthly magazine of the Pinball Machine Operators of America. BILL.

First race—Benjam handles himself like a coming juvenile. He will have the veteran Steffen to do the riding and I predict a winning effort. Family Friend, has good speed and is dangerous. The Maemere Farm entry of Maetall and Maepop may take a piece of the pay-off.

Second race—Shyno has done about everything asked in Florida. Appears ready to add another set of brackets. Ridge Mor and Warren Jr. have good speed and may take the place and show awards. Patsy Begone is dangerous to light weight.

Third race—Bird Flower is well placed and likes this mile route. Gets in with a steadying 110 pounds and I anticipate a victory. Plea and Col. Greene are ready for best efforts and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Fourth race—Chance Ray seems the best suited by conditions in this mile test. Recent races point to a winning race at this route. Reminding has the speed to make the most of the rail position and is dangerous. Dnieper for the show end.

Fifth race—Uneasy, from the Denemark Stable and with Kurtsinger to ride, may upset the highly-touted No Sir in this race. The latter probably will be close to even money and it seems against the rules for one of these to get home. Idle Midget for the show.

Sixth race—The Denemark Entry of Genie Palatine and Finance gets my call in this event. The former gets in light and has dazzling speed which she may hold to the end. Finance should be a stretch factor. White Cockade came to life last out and is a threat. Count Morse should better that last.

Seventh race—Sandwrack gets in action here with only 105 pounds and shifts from Catrone to LeBlanc. This may be a trifle too far for this veteran but I'm going to string along. Lady Marnock and Play Chance for the place and show.

Eighth race—Go Quickly has been passed along to me as one with an excellent chance of upsetting the talent. I'm looking forward to a good ride from Balaski and some sizeable odds. Sock Dologer and the disappointing Hot Cake for the other awards.

Best bet—Bird Flower.

Colonials Face Toughest Foe of Season Tonight in Geneva Five

Frosh to Play WPA Five In Opener

Geneva Is Second Team to Beat L. I. U. Since '34; G.W. Underdog.

The gnarled hand of old man opportunity will be knocking at George Washington's door tonight when the downtown dribblers meet Geneva at Tech High School, and the boys are prepared to give him a warm reception.

The game features a doubleheader of Grade A merit. George Washington's freshmen play the District WPA five in the curtain raiser at 7 o'clock, a feature in itself, and the varsity will trot out promptly at 8:30 o'clock.

The visitors are riding high on the crest of a five-game winning streak, which includes Long Island University's potent aggregation among the victims. The Pennsylvanians eked out a 33-31 decision over the Blackbirds on the latter's home court Monday night, the first time the feat has been accomplished since 1934. Geneva, incidentally, was the last team to humble Clair Bee's Birds in their own bailiwick.

Long Island, you will recall, topped G. W. by a comfortable margin at Madison Square Garden not so long ago, hence Reinhart's charges feel that a victory over Geyena will go far toward proving that they really aren't as bad as the Blackbirds made them out to be.

Milt Schonfeld, the Colonials' mighty midget, very likely will bear the brunt of the burden, inasmuch as Geneva employs a zone defense with more than average success, and Schonfeld is G. W.'s key man against such tactics. His trick of rolling it between a guard's legs, or pretending to and dribbling around—as he did against Monk Meyer of Army, should prove invaluable.

In George Washington's favor is its knack of whipping the zone defense, and the fact that it won its last four games with the invading quintet. This, in Reinhart's opinion, is insufficient to warrant a prediction that G. W. will win.

An added attraction tonight will be community singing to the accompaniment of Leon Brusiloff's music, featuring Arch McDonald and his old pine tree, which he has been trying to cut down and haul away these many years.

De Fino Breaks South Atlantic Pin Mark

Tony De Fino, diminutive veteran duckpin star, boldly inscribed his name in the duckpin hall of fame last night in the Columbia Heights League at Arcadia, creating a new South Atlantic record with a sensational game of 208. De Fino compiled his record mark by starting his string with a triple-header strike, two spares in the fourth and fifth frames, a flat eight box in the sixth, spared in the seventh, striked twice in the eighth and ninth and spared in the tenth. His score sheet looked like this: 30-58-79-96-114-122-142-170-190—208.

The former mark of 201 was held jointly by Charlie Young (1931) and Gordon Caldwell, of Richmond, Va. (1933). The world record game rolled by Tony Zagryn, of Bristol, Conn., in the Eastern Sweepstakes in February 1936, is but three pins better.

Another mark was shattered by De Fino when he finished his string with games of 122 and 119 for a new all-time Columbia Heights League set of 449, eight pins better than the mark hung up by Paulie Harrison in 1933. Incidentally Harrison's mark was broken twice last night, Harry Aiken turning the feat with a 445 set. In De Fino's big game his team, the Vincent Barbers, chalked up an all-time league set of 686 to beat Premier Cab.

The local duckpin fraternity, ever ready to lend its talent to the support of charity, has joined in the city-wide drive for the relief of flood victims. A mammoth bowling show is scheduled Saturday night at the Convention Hall alleys, where for a fee of 50 cents, duckpin enthusiasts can witness the greatest array of pin-experts the city has to offer.

The program will include the final block of the Howard Campbell Sweepstakes. Following the stakes will be a team match with a $1,000 stake, put up by the Regal Neon Signs five and Fred Buchholz's Occidental Restaurant team.

Maxie Rosenberg, sponsor of the Regal Neon Signs All-Stars has lined up a formidable team, with such noted performers as Joe Harrison, Johnny Anderson, Ollie Pacini, Ed Blakeney and himself. Carrying the banner for Occidental will be Astor Clarke, Perce Wolfe, Earl McPhilomy, Bill Krauss, Hokie Smith, and Dutch Newman.

Following the team match will be a head-to-head singles battle between Ida Simmons, national ranking pinwoman from Norfolk, Va., and Lorraine Gulli, the Capital's ace duckpinist and former national champion for six consecutive years.

Government League To Sponsor Eight Teams

The annual meeting of the U. S. Government Baseball League was held yesterday in the office of Director J. Edgar Hoover, of the Bureau of Investigation, where it was agreed to sponsor an eight-team circuit this year.

Five teams were approved, with three more applications to be decided upon. Naval Air Station, D. C. Commissioners, WPA, Bureau of Investigation and U. S. Treasury are the five clubs already members. Among those whose applications are pending are PWA and Procurement Division.

Fred Bucholtz was elected president for the third straight year. Other officers elected: Vice president, Edwin M. Curran; secretary, J. W. Leverton; treasurer, Stanley J. Tracy; councilor, J. Edgar Hoover.

Near-Record Entry List Seen For Maryland Ring Tourney

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Feb. 2.—Anticipating one of the largest entry lists in recent years, the Southern Conference Boxing committee made plans here today for the annual tournament to be held at College Park, Md., on February 26-27.

The committee, headed by Geary Eppley, University of Maryland athletic director, took no official notice of proposals for changes in intercollegiate boxing rules made as the result of the death of a V. M. I. cadet last week-end.

Consensus of the three-man group was that such action should be first taken by the National Intercollegiate Rules Association which would have to adopt any changes before they would become effective under present conference regulations.

An informal discussion "off the record" was held on a ten-point change in boxing regulations proposed by Coach Harvey L. Miller, of Maryland.

Individual members of the committee expressed regret that the accident occurred, indicated sympathy for the family of William Judson Eastham, the fatally injured boxer, and said they were sorry V. M. I. would not be represented at the tournament.

Meeting with Eppley were Robert A. Fetzer, of the University of North Carolina, veteran member of the committe, and Glenn F. Thistlehwaite, of the University of Richmond. James G. Driver, former chairman of the committee before the University of Virginia withdrew from the conference, was also present in an advisory capacity. Driver is also a member of the National Collegiate Athletic Association boxing committee.

For the first time in the history of the 11-year-old tournament there is prospect of three full teams being entered. They are Maryland, Duke and The Citadel. Heretofore the University of Virginia, host school to the tournament, has usually been the only participant with a full squad of eight boxers.

Committee members said that three new schools of the circuit planned to enter men and that this would more than make up for the loss of entries from Virginia and V. M. I. In addition to the full team from The Citadel, from two to four boxers will be entered from Richmond and at least two from Wake Forest. Entry blanks will go out within the next few days.

The staff of referees will be increased to four for the tourney, one working in the ring, two as judges, and the fourth as a supervisor of the weighing-in, bandaging, gloves and equipment.

Three physicians will be at the ringside throughout the meet, with the chief physician of the trio having authority even above the referee in determining whether a boxer is able to enter the ring, or if a bout should be allowed to continue. Boxers will undergo a physical examination before entering the ring.

The committee voted to conduct the routine details of the tourney on the same basis as in preceding years at Virginia. A meeting will be held at 10 a. m. February 25 at Washington to select the seeded boxers and draw for the pairings. The entries will be seeded on a basis of their records this season.

Greenskeepers Begin 3-Day Meeting

By Dave Herman.

More than 400 greenskeepers from all sections of the United States and Canada who represent an annual expenditure of $30,000,000 rubbed shoulders, exchanged ideas, looked wide-eyed at some ingenious devices to make all golf courses beautiful, and listened attentively to a series of lectures yesterday at Wardman Park Hotel.

The occasion was the opening of the three-day convention and show of the National Association of Greenskeepers of America, and they came from far and wide, to add to their knowledge of greens, fairways, tees, hazards.

Scotchmen, Irishmen, Dutchmen and even Russians, it was a cosmopolitan group.

Congressman Donald H. McLean, of Elizabeth, N. J., sounded the keynote speech at a gathering of association officials, and golf association leaders in lauding the work of the association of the Department of Agriculture on greens.

Scientists Talk.

Dr. M. A. McCall, assistant chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, lectured on "The Application of Science to Greenkeeping;" Dr. James Tyson, of the soils section, Michigan State College, spoke on "Golf Course Soils." Charles K. Hallowell, Philadelphia extension representative from Penn State College, discussed "The Agricultural Extension Service and Its Relation to the Golf Club."

Just as the farmer has been helped by science in the improvement of his crops, so has the greenskeeper in the upkeep of the golf course today, McCall pointed out.

Four More Lectures.

This afternoon there will be four additional lectures. Charles H. Connors, ornamental horticulturist, New Brunswick, N. J., will speak on "Landscaping the Clubhouse Grounds." J. K. Hanes, Charleston, S. C., will discuss "Maintaining Turf in the South." Dr. N. R. Smith, Bureau of Plant Industry, will talk on "Soil Organisms in Relation to Golf Turf," and Dr. C. N. Connor, highway engineer, Bureau of Public Roads, Department of Agriculture, on "Road Surfaces for Club Grounds."

John Anderson, of West Orange, N. J., as Scotch as they come, won the handshaking honors, because he happens to be president of the greenskeepers association.

In the exhibit room all the latest implements were on display.

Of particular interest was the City of Milwaukee sewerage exhibit. The sewerage commission sells golf fertilizer, said to be among the best. This waste matter is mixed with nitrogen, phosphate and potash, and thousands of dollars is poured into the Milwaukee coffers as a result.

GAMES FRIDAY.

Western vs. Wilson, 7:30 p. m., at Tech.
Eastern vs. Central, 8:30 p. m., at Tech.

By John R. Vosburgh.

Before countless empty seats and a few spectators, Central High led Wilson's basketball team to the chopping block yesterday at Roosevelt gymnasium and extricated a 43-to-20 victory. The first half of the interhigh series came to a smashing conclusion in the last five seconds of play when George Flather sank a desperate shot to give Wilson the highest point-score it has tallied in an interhigh game.

Faithful to the end, a small but vociferous group of Wilson supporters cheered this Wilson achievement as though the Green had toppled Eastern's champions. From a Central standpoint, the victory was its first since the Dark Blue spilled Eastern in the first half of the series.

Coach Jack Ray remarked after the game that he is looking forward to Central's second game with Eastern, Friday night at Tech. The Central team seems to be the only combination having Eastern's number and the Dark Blue boys are only too anxious to get another crack at the champions.

Central Shooting Improves.

Among the latter will be Billy Vermillion, high scorer of the series, who has registered 46 in five games to date. Central displayed some improved shooting yesterday, with the marksmanship of Hymie Goldblatt, hitherto a substitute, standing out conspicuously with the consistent point-making of Vermillion and Charlie Clark, who scored 12 and 8 points, respectively.

Flather, with 8 points, became the highest scorer for a single game Wilson has yet produced but was rather late getting started, getting all of his points in the last few minutes of play.

Wilson held to its customary custom of a slow start, allowing Central to get off to a 14-0 lead, with Vermillion ending the first quarter with three straight baskets. Coach Ray inserted his second-stringers in the next period and Wilson kept pace with Central for the second quarter, which ended with the count 20-8.

Central's regulars ran the score to 29-12 in the third period and in the final stanza Goldblatt sank 8 points and Vermillion 4 to help run the Dark Blue score into the forties as Flather scored 6 of the last 8 Wilson points.

Eastern High Wins.

Alexandria, Va., Feb. 2.—Eastern High, scholastic champions of Washington, journeyed across the Potomac today and plastered a 33-23 beating on George Washington High. The visitors took a 13-7 lead in the first half under the leadership of Clint Quantrille, lanky center, who found the hoop for four free throws and four baskets for a dozen points.

St. John's Conquers Roosevelt, 27-13, to Avenge Earlier Loss

By Jack Munhall.

The maroon and gray colors of St. John's Prep floated proudly over the Vermont avenue school yesterday after the Cadets had achieved a 27 to 13 triumph over Roosevelt on the Cadet court before a cheering capacity crowd.

The victory took most of the sting from a 24-to-23 loss suffered at Roosevelt's hands several weeks ago at Roosevelt in a game which has been replayed mentally countless times by rooters of both schools. In that contest the Cadets held a 23-to-22 lead with seconds to play when Ray Fridrick, burly Roosevelt forward, broke up a freezing attempt and let fly from midcourt to sink a disputed goal as the gun cracked to win. A protest did little but leave a sore spot that was removed yesterday.

Little Smokey Joe Gallagher, Cadet guard, was the dynamo, the key man of the passing attack which baffled the Rough Riders, and his deadly pot shooting took the fight out of the invaders.

Fridrick scored the only three field goals credited to the losers and his 8 points were over half of the team's total. But Fridrick's efforts were far eclipsed by Gallagher and another vest-pocket performer named Batiste, who teamed with Gallagher to score 18 of the 27 made by St. John's.

The first quarter was featured by leech-like guarding on the part of each team, and St. John's held a 3-to-1 lead at quarter. This was lengthened to 14 to 7 at half.

Heurich Cagers Face N. Y. U. Stars on Sunday

"King Kong" Klein's New York University stars will furnish the opposition for the Heurich Brewers professional basketball team Sunday afternoon at the Heurich gym at 3:30 o'clock.

There will be a triple-header. At 1:30 CCC will meet D. C. Fire Department and at 2:30 Sterling and Fort Myer will meet.

Terps Feared Out of League Cage Play

4 Wins in 5 Games Needed to Enter Conference Court Tourney.

For the first time since 1924, when basketball was accorded a major sports rating at the school, the University of Maryland may not qualify for the annual conference tournament, it was disclosed yesterday.

To be eligible for the lose-and-out championship round scheduled at Raleigh March 4, 5 and 6, teams must place eighth or better in competition with conference opponents during the regular season, and at this writing the Terrapins are running a poor twelfth.

Ahead of them on the scale are Washington and Lee, Duke, North Carolina State, North Carolina, Richmond, Wake Forest, South Carolina, Furman, V. M. I., V. P. I., and Davidson.

The herculean task of winning four of its next five league games faces the Terps if they would be included in the select eight, but this is but a slim hope at best. Saturday they meet North Carolina, then in order follow William and Mary, V. M. I., Washington and Lee, and North Carolina State, all tough opponents.

C.U., Columbus Boxers Face Pitt, Toledo

The "C" men of Catholic University and Columbus returned to hard labor yesterday in preparation for this week's matches with Pittsburgh and University of Toledo, respectively.

Coach Eddie LaFond of Catholic was no little disturbed by reports that the Panthers are taking their ring work more seriously this winter and have a top-notch collection of gladiators. No less worried was Jim McNamara, Columbus tutor, who understands that Toledo is a major power in Midwest boxing circles.

Two members of Pitt's Rose Bowl football team are members of the ring squad, but only one will be seen in action Saturday. Both are heavyweights. They are Al Lezouski, a guard, who probably will get the assignment, and Ted Schmidt, a substitute tackle.

Six of the regular team are sophomores, most of them former amateur fighters who earned their spurs in Pittsburgh rings, and two are lettermen from last year. Capt. Cleon Linderman, 155 pounds, and Johnny Stinko, 145 pounds, are the veterans.

Bill Vermillion Leads School Scorers

Central Five Tops Teams in Scoring With 143, or 28 Per Game.

After lengthy use of automatic calculators, adding machines and similar paraphernalia, it was learned late last night that Capt. Billy Vermillion of Central is the foremost exponent of how to score points in this here game of basketball that the interhigh series has yet produced.

When George Flather of Wilson High sank the last basket of yesterday's Central-Wilson game it enabled your statisticians to go into a trance and pull out the following facts as the interhigh series reaches the halfway point.

High scorer—Billy Vermillion, Central, 46 points.

Best foul shooter—Billy Vermillion, Central, 10 out of 15.

His cast-iron stomach could handle it, but modern men wisely prefer the milder whiskey with all these 3 VIRTUES:

1 The new good taste of IRISH AMERICAN

2 The greater mildness of IRISH AMERICAN

3 The easier digestibility of IRISH AMERICAN

THE perfumed dandy of Bonnie Prince Charlie's time was anything but dainty at the table. Diet meant nothing to him. He gorged himself with rich, half-cooked foods; guzzled thunder-headed wines; tossed down cupfuls of fierce, raw spirits! What punishment his system was forced to endure!

Modern man's constitution is not conditioned to such abuse. Even if he wanted to he couldn't take it the way this "sissy" took it in those "good (?) old days."

Discriminating men of today demand better taste, better quality and better behavior in their whiskey. And so, today, IRISH AMERICAN Whiskey is welcomed enthusiastically wherever it is introduced. Here is a whiskey which was especially developed for modern tastes, especially designed for modern living.

It is the one whiskey—and the one and only whiskey—with all three of the important virtues listed above.

In this fine product are combined the riches of round, robust, imported pot still whiskey and specially distilled, straight Kentucky whiskey. The result of their happy union is a liquor offering, as only IRISH AMERICAN can, this combination of new good taste, definite mildness and easier digestibility.

Ask for IRISH AMERICAN wherever good liquors are sold. In spite of its exclusive advantages, you will find it moderately priced.

Acting Secretary of the Treasury Taylor announces that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 273-day Treasury bills, dated February 3 and maturing November 3, 1937, which were offered on January 29, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total amount applied for was $191,855,000, of which $50,385,000 was accepted. The accepted bids ranged in price from 99.760, equivalent to a rate of about 0.316 per cent per annum, to 99.694, equivalent to a rate of about 0.404 per cent per annum, on a bank discount basis.

The Market

Stocks Gain Ground With Motor and Rail Equipment Shares Leading; Bonds Firm.

New York, Feb. 2.—Stocks moved slowly ahead on a turnover of 2,300,000 shares, about the same as the previous day's dealings. Prices in the last hour were near the best. High grade bonds also hardened. Dollars dropped back a little before sterling and francs. May wheat closed ⅛ of a cent higher at 128 cents a bushel.

On realizatio nthat prolongation of the General Motors strike would shift a good deal of business to other motor car makers, buying of Chrysler, Hudson, Studebaker and even Auburn, turned brisk and good advances were made. Chrysler's rise of four or five points was the feature. Demand for motor cars this summer probably will not be materially reduced, even among motor factory workers who are taking part in the strikes or who are forced to remain idle. General Motors spurted near the close on the injunction news.

Mail order, fertilizer and other stocks dependent largely on rural purchasing for their prosperity did well. The market concluded that loss of trade in the flooded regions would not be enough to offset improvement in sections which will be helped by the rains and which in any case stand to obtain larger income, if not in crops at least in Government doles.

Speculative attention was directed toward the railroad equipment issues. Reports of a large locomotive order for Lima lifted that stock. New York Air Brake was another fast climber. Others in the group were strong to buoyant, partly on the railroad replacements sure to be made. Steel shares again refused to stay down, and traders supposed that any bullish arguments offered for other favorite groups applied directly or indirectly to the steels. United States Steel began poorly and then advanced to a new top. Crucible and Republic also were ceiling bumpers.

Buying of the railroad equipments spilled over the Stock Exchange dikes and invaded the Curb, where Brill issues extended their recent gains 1 to 7 points. Railroad stocks were less lively, although Southern stood out with its rise to a new high price. Other favorites were Southern Pacific, Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

The depressed canning stocks continued their recovery. American and Continental stiffened. Packing shares turned over in large volume. Armour and Wilson were the most active, the former selling at a fresh top. Miscellaneous issues to move ahead were McKesson & Robbins, in the low-priced class, and Fajardo Sugar, on an increased dividend.

Coppers Gain.

Coppers moved ahead with Kennecott gaining the most ground. Howe Sound and Inspiration were buoyant. Utilities did well, plugging along with fanfare. The principal gainers were Consolidated Edison, American Water Works, North American, Electric Power and People's Gas. Oils were firm. Texas proceeded to a new high price.

Among the best stocks of the day were United States Pipe, Westinghouse, A. O. Smith, Reliable Stores, Ingersoll Rand and American Chain. Panhandle Producing preferred broke more than 6 points. Cuba Railroad preferred and Consolidated Railroad of Cuba preferred tumbled 1 to 2 points.

News of the day affecting securities markets was singularly lacking in interest, compared with the recent daily contributions until near the close when the motor injunction news was learned, and another 24 hours passed without action or hint in credit regulation at Washington. The fighting in Spain seems to have been stored for a while in the warehouses, and even the home weather is beginning to pall.

Advance of the flood crest to the lower Mississippi and the recession of the waters from the central industrial regions is doing something to restore business confidence. For the next few months the expenditures for railroad repairs, building construction and the like will overshadow the flood losses. All that business lacks to stimulate it into a heady spring rise is a settlement of labor disputes. If stocks, as many believe, have gone ahead too far, at least they are no farther ahead of business than they have been for several months and present quotations at least are taking on the stability that comes with familiarity.

Banking Position.

Condition figures of Federal Reserve member banks in leading cities as of January 27 are dominated by changes which were reported in the New York City bank figures last Thursday. All the increase in loans on securities to others than brokers and dealers, amounting to $24,000,000, occurred in New York, while this city also accounted for $14,000,000 of the $21,000,000 drop in mixed loans. Government securities fell $50,000,000 for all member banks, but since the New York banks disposed of $60,000,000, there was a net increase in other districts, the Chicago increase being $16,000,000. Guaranteed Government securities were down $17,000,000 for all banks, $9,000,000 of the decrease being reported from Dallas. Other securities were up $22,000,000 in New York and were higher by $17,000,000 for the country as a whole. Reserves rose $30,000,000. There were substantial shifts in deposits between districts outside of New York.

General Motors.

General Motors hardened a little after an opening drop of a point. Some traders were disappointed at the 25-cent dividend voted yesterday afternoon, inasmuch as a year ago the board decided to pay 50 cents a share. On the other hand at least one paper printed the chilly rumors making the day's rounds of the brokers' boardrooms that the corporation might not pay anything this time. Earnings no doubt will be reduced this quarter because of the strike and the future will be uncertain until the labor troubles are settled. In any event, General Motors undoubtedly will follow the du Pont plan of paying moderate interim dividends and casting up the accounts for the year-end large or small payment, depending on earnings, in November or December. That is an excellent dividend policy for any company under any circumstances, and so long as the penalty tax on undistributed profits remains, it is bound to come into increasing use.

Sears, Roebuck Lift Common to $3 Rate

Chicago, Feb. 2 (AP).—Sears, Roebuck & Co., put the common stock on a $3 annual dividend basis today with the declaration of a regular quarterly payment of 75 cents a share, payable March 15 to stock of record February 15. Last year the stock was on a $2 annual basis, although the company declared an extra dividend of $1.75 a share payable December 15, and later another extra of $2.50. The company's sales in the fiscal year ended last week broke all previous records.

World Tonnage Of New Ships Up 60 Per Cent

1936 Output of Merchant Vessels in the U. S. Rose 79,000 Tons.

New York, Feb. 2.—An increase of more than 60 per cent in the total tonnage of merchant vessels launched throughout the world in 1936, as compared with 1935, is shown by a statement issued today by Lloyd's Register of Shipping, covering all vessels of 100 gross tons each and upward, for all countries except Russia, for which returns have not been available for some time.

Launchings during 1936 aggregated 2,117,924 gross tons, a gain of 815,000 tons over the figure for 1935. The 1936 total is the largest annual output since 1930, and the year's gain is the largest reported since 1919. Last year's total of 2,117,000 tons, however, compares with one of 3,332,000 tons for the last prewar year, 1913.

All but three of the ten leading maritime countries of the world launched more tonnage last year than in 1935, Lloyd's Register reports. Denmark, France and Italy were the ones to show declines.

Great Britain and Ireland showed a gain of 357,000 tons, Germany one of 153,000 tons, and Japan one of 148,000 tons. The output of the United States was increased 79,000 tons, that of Holland 36,000 tons, and of Norway 7,000 tons.

	1936	1935
Great Britain and Ireland	856,257	499,011
United States	111,885	32,607
Other countries	1,149,782	770,462

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil futures registered the highest turnover on record today. Contracts changing hands amounted to 609, which included 8 switches. The market was weak under renewed liquidation and commission house selling encouraged by the increase in lard stocks, easiness of lard, lower cotton and easier tallow and greases. There were partial recoveries from the lowest, with the market closing 7 to 10 points net down. There was considerable undoing of spreads by purchases of cotton oil against sales of cotton for European interests. Transit Gains Set Twenty-Year Record

New York, Feb. 2.—Gains made by the transit industry in 1936 were the largest in 20 years, according to the annual statistical number of Transit Journal. Operating revenues were up 6½ per cent over 1935, and purchases of new equipment broke all previous records.

Street railway and rapid transit revenues increased only moderately, while bus revenues, both trolley and motor, have shown proportionately larger increases due to the rapid expansion of these services. Motor buses and trolley buses are now carrying about 2⁰ per cent of the total business, as compared with 21 per cent a year ago, while the rail lines are now carrying 76 per cent as compared with 79 per cent a year ago.

Bond Prices Rise 10% Above 1929

New York, Feb. 2.—Contrary to popular conception, the stock advance since 1934, according to Administrative and Research Corporation, has not brought stocks to the high levels achieved by bonds during the same period. Taking 1929 as an index at 100, bonds declined only 34 per cent to 1932, and stocks, in the same period fell 87 per cent. In the subsequent recovery period between 1932-1934, stocks advanced 125 per cent from their lows, while bonds, which gained only 54 per cent, re-achieved their 1929 level.

Since 1934, however, bonds have advanced 10 per cent over the 1929 index, but gained only 9 per cent in percentages of appreciation, while the stock advance of 81 per cent appreciation in value, brought stocks to only 4 per cent on their 1929 level.

Canadian Dividends Highest in 6 Years

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Dividend payments approximating $21,000,000, or the highest total for any similar month since 1931, were made to stockholders of Canadian corporations in January.

PERCENTAGES IN IMPROVEMENT

Federal Reserve Board reports show that for 1936 the residential building index stood at only 36 and freight car loadings at 71, whereas industrial production was at 103 and factory employment at 91. ¶ These instances illustrate the wide variation in recovery in different fields of business, and indicate the value of such facilities as the "F. & B. Industries Service" in enabling investors to make comparisons covering all major industries, as the basis for well-timed selection of securities.

Boston, Feb. 2 (AP) (U. S. Department of Agriculture.)—Quotations were unchanged at last week's ranges on domestic wools even though there was a very small demand today.

Mills made lower bids on spot Australian fine merino wools and on grossbred South American lines. Some holders were apparently inclined to reach the lower bids. At the same time, cables received by private concerns in Boston indicated that prices were firmer in Australia.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A sharp rise in German registered and travel marks in foreign exchange dealings yesterday was explained by traders as due to a drying up of offerings. Demand was moderate.

The registered unit in New York was up .65 of a cent at 19.30 cents, while travel marks gained .45 of a cent at 20.60 cents; free marks were quoted at 40.23½ cents, up .00½ of a cent.

Other currencies were irregular. The pound sterling advanced ¼ of a cent at 4.66 3-16 cents and the Netherlands guilder, at 54.76 cents and the Canadian dollar, at 100.00 cents, were unchanged.

The dollar lost ¼ of a cent in London, closing at 4.89⅞ to the pound, which compared with the New York overnight rate of 14.89 11-16. It finished in Paris at the equivalent of 4.662 cents to the franc against the New York overnight rate of 4.663 cents.

Citizenship Given To Alien Husband Of American Wife

According foreign born husbands of American women the same rights as those granted foreign born wives of Americans, Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, in District Court yesterday granted Amercan citizenship to Frederick Belton, who for 14 years has been member of the United States Marine Corps.

Born under the English flag, Belton came to the United States in 1923 and enlisted in the Marine Corps six months later. Numerous transfers to active duty outside the territorial limits of the country prevented him from going through with his naturalization and when he returned here in 1934 he was told that he would have to wait five years to apply for naturalization despite his service in the Marine Corps.

In his decision yesterday Chief Justice Wheat held, in effect, that the naturalization law of 1922, which enabled the foreign born wives of United Etates citizens to become, autimatically, citizens of this country upon marriage, applied likewise to foriegn born husbands who were wedded to American born wives. The couple, according to attorney William W. Stickney, an officer in the Marine Reserves, has three children.

In his argument to the court, Stickney pointed out that Belton was unable to comply with the physical requisites of the law governing naturalization because he was always being shifted about in the Marine Corps, mostly being on foreign duty.

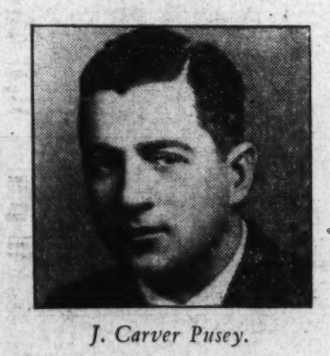
I GOT NED KICKED OFF THE TEAM FOR FIGHTING AND SET MYSELF UP FOR THE STARRING ROLE IN THE STATE GAME, BUT HE SURE SMACKED ME!
HOW DO YOU SUPPOSE HE FIGURED OUT THE WHOLE DEAL —MY INSULTING HIM SO HED HIT ME, AND ALL?

ALL RIGHT, BUD SHEKELS— COME OUT HERE WHERE WE'LL BE NICE AND EXCLUSIVE— IF YOU'VE GOT THE NERVE!
WELL, I HOPE YOU'RE SATISFIED AND NOW I'M GOING TO KNOCK THE SLATS OUT OF YOU!
I HOPE YOU'RE FEELING GREAT— I WANT TO WHIP YOU, WHEN YOU'RE AT YOUR BEST!

About the Man Responsible for . . .

Benny



J. Carver Pusey.

HE'S A FARMER . . . J. Carver Pusey, creator of "BENNY" . . . young, handsome, rugged, full of enthusiasm. But like a lot of farmers, these days, he finds the farm more of a liability than an asset and does cartoons to help keep the farm going.

HE OWNS a big stable of horses and rides at every opportunity. And his wife, who is extremely beautiful, rides with him.

HE WAS BORN south of Philadelphia, brought up west of Philadelphia and bought the farm . . . eighteen acres of it . . . north of Philadelphia, in the wilds of Bucks County.

SINCE CHILDHOOD, he has made funny little sketches of things and people, just for the pleasure of making them. Then he sent a few to newspapers and magazines and was somewhat surprised to find that they were printed.

HIS FIRST comic strip was called "CAT TAILS." That lived out its nine lives making way for the great inspiration of Mr. Pusey's artistic life . . . "BENNY" And "BENNY" . . . the youngster without a family, home or visible means of support, facing the world alone, never uttering a word (unkind, or otherwise), but saying more with a shrug of his shoulders or a flick of his hand than most people do with the aid of a dictionary . . . has thousands of friends everywhere, on whose heartstings he pulls, while tickling their funnybones with his own particular bran dof pathos and humor in pantomime.

BECAUSE THEY were such admirers and followers of "BENNY," the famous Marx Brothers persuaded Artist Pusey to go out to Hollywood, at a fabulous salary as "gag-man" for their newest movie. But even the Marx Brothers couldn't keep him away from the charms of his Bucks County farm. And he's there now . . . riding the horses, milking the cow and turning out the daily "BENNY" strip, as it appears each morning to delight Washington Post readers.

Collins Plans Chain Bridge One-Way Toll

will inspect all local welfare institutions, hospitals, and health agencies for which additional money is being requested by the District Commissioners.

Tomorrow the members will visit the schools.

Tour Is Conducted.

Commissioners Hazen and Sultan and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, acted as guides for the committee members. The first stop was Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, which Collins commented was "badly in need of replocement." He estimated the eventual cost will be $2,000,000.

After a tour of some of the 46 street projects in the District budget, the committee went to Chain Bridge.

Besides Collins the sub-committee members who went on the tour were Representative Caldwell (Democrat), Florida; Starnes (Democrat), Alabama, and Engel (Republican), Michigan. Representative Higgins (Democrat), Massachusetts, is ill.

The District Motor Club of the American Automobile Association meanwhile estimated that the bill introduced by Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, to make the District eligible for Federal highway aid on the same basis as the States will produce approximately $600,000 a year.

Bill Fully Supported.

"While Federal-aid is apportioned to the States on the basis of area, population and road mileage, provision is made for the smaller States to get a minimum of one-half of 1 per cent of the total. Thus, States like Delaware, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont, and the Territory of Hawaii now receive about $609,000 annually. The District of Columbia, if the King bill is passed, would receive approximately the same amount.

"Roads and streets on which Federal funds would be expended would be determined and agreed upon by the highway department of the District and the Secretary of Agriculture, without regard to certain limitation in the Federal highway act. Provision is also made that when the system first determined and agreed upon shall be completed, additions may be made in like manner as funds become available."

The sum of $60,000 is needed to relieve the situation in the institutions for the insane until October 1, when the new budget goes into effect.

Trader Widow Slew Husband, Jury Charges

Lie Detector Tests Lead to Maryland Woman's Indictment.

By the Associated Press.

Snow Hill, Md., Feb. 2.—An indictment charging Mrs. Jeannette Trader with the murder of her welathy estranged husband was handed down today by the special grand jury investigating his fatal shooting in her home.

Judge James M. Crocket, said the Circuit Court would convene Friday, when Mrs. Trader will be arraigned and formally charged with murder and her attorneys allowed to enter pleas.

The indictment of the 37-year-old mother of three probably will cause withdrawal of the habeas corpus petition through which her attorneys sought today to gain her release from the Worcester County Jail.

The jury which has been endeavoring to determine whether Trader, owner of the Stockton light and power plant, committed suicide or was killed on January 14, adjourned its special session at 4:45 p. m.

The indictment came as Mrs. Trader remained in jail while her attorneys sought her release and police credited a "lit detector" with leading to her arrest.

Lieut. Ruxton Ridgley, of the State police, said the "lie detector" tests given Sam Smith, 63, of Pungoteague, Va., led to Mrs. Trader's arrest. The machine records the heart beat and breathing of persons being questioned.

Smith, father of seven children, took the tests last night on the apparatus brought here by Lieut. John A. Funk, of the criminal investigation bureau of the Pennsylvania State police.

Shown the results of the test, Ridgley said, Smith admitted he owned the pistol found beside Trader's body in his wife's home. Trader had named Smith co-respondent in a divorce suit.

Mrs. Trader was arrested after Smith took the tests. Smith was detained at the home of Police Chief John Peroutka. State's Attorney Thomas F. Johnson said Smith was not under arrest, although he admitted owning the death gun.

State Laws Urged On Child Marriage

By the Associated Press.

Government officials and others pleaded yesterday for uniform State laws prohibiting child marriages like the recent wedding of a Tennessee girl of 9 to a 22-year-old mountaineer.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, at her press conference, said the matter was up to the States but that nine years seemed a little young for nuptials.

Miss Mary Anderson, Woman's Bureau chief, said the marriage of Eunice Winstead, 9, to Charles Johns, down in Tennessee, was "deplorable."

"There should be uniform laws throughout the States making the age of consent for both boys and girls 1 8years," she said.

"Every State should enact laws making 16 the age limit for marriageof girls," said Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau.

Countryman Paints Portrait Of Ambassador From Poland

The tall, soldierly envoy from Warsaw was interviewed yesterday in the sitting posture, the while Boleslaw Jan Czedekowski, famed Polish painter, outlined his likeness on canvas with Dutch oils.

The Ambassador admitted that the one-hour-a-day sitting was quite an ordeal—more strenuous in fact than engaging in a verbal duel with the Lithuanian minister over Vilna. But he has stuck it out grimly now for seven days and there is only one more sitting to go.

Chevalier of the Legion d'Honneur, Czedekowski has had his paintings on exhibit at the Royal Academy of London, and at the salon of the "Societe des Artistes Francais and the Cercle de l'Union Artistique, most fashionable art centers in Paris. One portrait—"The Artist's Family"—is now on display in Glasgow, while others are at the museums in Boston and Worchester and at various universities.

Among other noted persons whose portraits he has done have been the late Emperor of Austria, Emperor Karl, as well as Archduke Leopold Salvator, Marshal Foch and Mussolini's Austrian counterpart, Prince Ernst Starhemberg. In this country, which he has visited five times, he painted portraits of F. L. Loree and his family, Bishop Dunn, of New York, Senator Washburn's family and Franklin and Mrs. Crosby, of Minneapolis.

Hamilton Bank Teller Arrested As Embezzler

C. J. Crump Denies Charge of Misappropriation of $6,200.

Charles J. Crump, paying and receiving teller at the Hamilton National Bank, was arrested by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation yesterday in connection with an alleged misappropriation of $6,200 of the bank's funds.

The money, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, said Crump told his agents, was used to bet on race horses and to pay family expenses.

Hoover said Crump, an employe of various banks in Washington for 20 years, admitted taking the money in varying amounts over a period of approximately three years.

However, at a secret arraignment before United States Commissioner Nedham Turnage on charges based on the alleged misappropriation, Crump entered a plea of not guilty. He waived his right to a preliminary hearing and was released under $2,000 bond pending action of the grand jury.

Man has penetrated no more than 14 miles above the earth's surface, yet he has succeeded in counting the electrified particles, or ions, that fill each cubic inch of space at a height of 190 miles.

Electrical conditions vary from day to night, from season to season and with the number of sun spots, he declared. Coincident with the unusual solar activity during the last two years, ion-density increased approximately 50 per cent 65 to 130 miles above the earth and more than 200 per cent at the 190-mile level.

"Practical aspects are of considerable importance," said Dr. Berkner. "For example, police radio stations installed a few years ago and operating on high radio frequencies which could then be received only 30 or 40 miles away are now frequently heard on the other side of the Atlantic.

"When the stations were first established, the high frequencies used penetrated the ionosphere and were lost in space, but now, owing to the increased ion-densities obtaining in the ionosphere, they are reflected back to the earth so that their echoes are received at great distances."

At noon of a midsummer's day in Washington, there are about 2,800,000 ions per cubic inch 65 miles aloft. At 130 miles the density is 5,300,000, and at 190 miles it is 16,000,000 or more, according to the physicist.

"Some of the editors said it was 'jackass legislation,'" Morgan said. "I agree it was 'jackass legislation' designed to reach the jackass editors who have been running unbridled for all time.
